PREFACE

Josephus, published under the auspices of the Kohut Foundation of the Jewish Institute of Religion. The first fascicle of this Lexicon appeared some time after Dr. Thackeray's death, and a second fascicle, completed by the writer, is expected to appear shortly.

Beside the earlier versions of the Antiquities made by Hudson, Weill and Whiston-Shilleto, two recent works have been consulted in preparing the latter part of this volume; these are Agada und Exegese bei Flavius Josephus by Salomo Rappaport, Vienna, 1930, and Legends of the Jews by Louis Ginzberg (six volumes), Philadelphia, 1909-1928 (abbr. Ginzberg in the footnotes); the latter is an invaluable collection of rabbinic material illustrating the amplification of scriptural narratives and furnishing many instructive parallels to Josephus's treatment of his biblical text. The writer has, in addition, independently examined the text of the Targum (the Aramaic translation of the Bible, used in the early synagogue) and the mediaeval Hebrew commentaries reprinted in the Rabbinic Bible. For the identification of many of the Biblical place-names the writer is indebted to the researches of Professor W. F. Albright and other scholars, whose results have appeared in the Bulletin of the American Schools of Oriental Research.

With regard to the Greek text, the writer, like Dr. Thackeray, has attempted to furnish a critical edition on the basis of the apparatus in Niese's editio maior, not (as some reviewers of the earlier volumes by Dr. Thackeray have described it) an edition based solely on Niese's text. Whether the text here given is as satisfactory as the excellent ones furnished by Niese and by Naber in the Teubner series must be left to the critics to decide. The problems of Josephus's text in these books are very complex, partly because of the twofold Ms. tradition, partly because of the use made by the author of a Greek version of Scripture, and the corrections made by Christian copyists in the interest of conformity to the biblical text known to them, and partly because of the apparent revisions made by Josephus's Greek assistants. These difficulties are illustrated by the inconsistent spelling of biblical names of persons and places in the same Ms. and the variants in the two families of Mss. No editor may reasonably hope to have established, in every case, the forms used by Josephus himself.

The writer has been similarly inconsistent in his rendering of these biblical names. The most commonly known names, such as Hebron, Absalom, etc., are given in the form familiar to English readers, whether or not they accurately reproduce the Greek spelling of Josephus's text; where the name is not quite so well known and where the Greek form differs only slightly from that found in the Authorized Version of Scripture, it is rendered approximately, e.g. Abisai (for Abisaios; bibl. Abishai), Achab (for Achabos; bibl. Ahab); in all other cases the hellenized form is simply transliterated, e.g. Jebosthos (bibl. Ish-bosheth), Adrazaros (bibl. Hadadezer).

For a discussion of Josephus's use of the Hebrew original of Scripture and of the Greek version known as the Septuagint (abbr. Lxx in the footnotes), the reader may consult Dr. Thackeray's Josephus, the Man and the Historian (Stroock Lectures at the Jewish Institute of Religion), N.Y., 1929, Lecture IV. It will be seen from the discussion there and from the explanatory notes in this volume that Josephus's text often agrees with that group of LXX MSS. which represent the so-called Lucianic recension (abbr. Luc. in the footnotes), made at the end of the third century A.D. It is, therefore, evident that this recension is based on a text which existed as early as the time To Dr. Thackeray's comments on of Josephus. Josephus's agreement with the Targum in certain passages against the Hebrew and Greek texts of Scripture, and to the examples of such agreement adduced by Mez (Die Bibel des Josephus) and Rappaport, the present writer has added in the footnotes what he ventures to believe are new instances of Josephus's use of an Aramaic translation of Scripture practically identical with the traditional Targum of Jonathan, which has usually been supposed to date from a period almost a century later than Josephus.

He also sent scouts to Jos. i. 10; Jericho to reconnoitre the strength and the disposition of the inhabitants, while he himself reviewed his army, intending at the first opportunity to cross the Jordan. Having, moreover, called up the princes i. 12, 13. of the tribe of Rubel a and the chiefs of the tribes of Gad and of Manasseh-for one half of this tribe too had been permitted to settle in the Amorite country, which forms a seventh part b of the land of Canaan -he reminded them of their promises to Moses and exhorted them, out of respect alike for that forethought of his on their behalf which even in his dying moments had never flagged, and for the common weal, to respond to his orders with alacrity. b The Amorites were one of the "seven nations" that inhabited Canaan (Deut. vii. 1, Jos. iii. 10; cf. §§ 88 f. below). From this apparently, as M. Weill suggests, Josephus infers that they occupied a seventh part of the whole country.

Those who met them had disregarded their inspection, attributing to a curiosity natural to strangers this busy study of every detail in the city, and in no wise to any hostile intent. But when, at fall of even, they retired to an inn b hard by the ramparts, to which they had proceeded of for supper, and were now only thinking of departure, word was brought to the king as he supped that certain persons had come from the camp of the Hebrews to spy upon the city and were now in Rahab's inn, mightily anxious to escape detection. And he straightway sent men after them, with orders to arrest and bring them up, that he might discover by torture to what intent they were come. But when Rahab learnt of their approach, being then engaged in drying some bundles of flax upon the roof, she concealed the spies therein, and told the king's messengers that some unknown strangers had shortly before sundown supped with her and gone their way; but, were it thought that the city had cause to fear them or were their coming fraught with peril to the king, they could be caught without difficulty if pursued. The messengers, thus cajoled by the woman and suspecting no guile, departed without even searching the inn; but when, after speeding along the roads by which they thought it most likely that the men had fled, including all those leading to the river, they found no trace of them, they ceased to trouble themselves further. The tumult having subsided, Rahab brought the men down and, having told them of the risk which she had run for their salvation—for, had she been caught concealing them, she would not have escaped the vengeance of the king but she and all her house would have perished miserably—she besought them to bear this in mind when, once masters of the land of the Canaanites, they should be in a position to recompense her for their present salvation; and she bade them depart to their own place, after swearing that they would verily save her and all that was hers when, on taking the city, they should destroy all its inhabitants, as had been decreed by their people, for of this (she said) she knew through certain signs a which God had given her. In reply they expressed their gratitude to her for present favours and swore to repay her in future by recompense in act; but they counselled her, when she should see that the city was on the point of being taken, to secure her chattels and all her household within the inn and to shut them in, and to extend red flags before her doors, a in order that their general. recognizing the house, might refrain from doing it injury. "For," said they, "we shall report to him that it is to thy zeal that we owe our lives. But. should any of thy kinsmen fall in the battle, thou must not lay that to our charge, and we implore the God by whom we have sworn to be in no wise indignant at us, as though we had transgressed our oaths." So having made this compact, they departed, letting themselves down the wall by a rope and, when safely restored to their friends, they recounted their adventures in the city. Joshua thereupon reported to Eleazar the high priest and to the council of elders what the spies had sworn to Rahab: and they ratified the oath.

(3) Now since the army was afraid to cross the Crossing of river, which had a strong current and could not the Jordan be crossed by bridges-for it had not been spanned by any hitherto, and, should they wish to lay them now, the enemy would not, they imagined, afford them the leisure, and they had no ferry-boats -God promised to render the stream passable for them by diminishing its volume. b So Joshua, having Jos. iii. 2. waited two days, proceeded to transport the army with the whole multitude in the following fashion. At the head went the priests bearing the ark, next the Levites carrying the tabernacle and the vessels for the ministry of the sacrifices, and, after the Levites, followed, tribe by tribe, the whole throng,

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, V. 18-22

When the priests, who were the first to enter, found the river fordable—the depth having diminished and the shingle, which the current was neither full nor rapid enough to force from under their feet, lying as a solid floor-all thereupon confidently traversed the stream, perceiving it to be even as God had foretold that He would make it. But the iii. 17, priests stood still in the midst until the multitude had crossed and reached the firm ground.a Then, when all had crossed, the priests emerged, leaving the stream free to resume its accustomed course. And the river, so soon as the Hebrews had quitted it, swelled and recovered its natural magnitude.

(4) These, having advanced fifty stades, pitched Erection of their camp at a distance of ten stades b from Jericho. celebration And Joshua, with the stones which each of the of Passover. tribal leaders had, by the prophet's orders, taken up from the river-bed, erected that altar that was to serve as a token of the stoppage of the stream, and sacrificed thereon to God. They also kept the v. 10. feast of the Passover at that spot, being now readily and amply provided with all that they had lacked before; for they reaped the corn of the Canaanites, now at its prime, and took any other booty they could. It was then too that the supply of manna ceased which had served them for forty years.

(5) Since, notwithstanding these actions of the Encompass-Israelites, the Canaanites did not sally out against ing of the them but remained motionless behind their walls, Jericho.

b These distances are unscriptural. The Gilgal of the camp (Jos. v. 10) is usually identified with a site more than ten stades distant (S.E.) from Jericho.

Josephus here omits the renewal at Gilgal of the rite of circumcision which had been neglected in the wilderness (Jos. v. 2 ff.).

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, 22-26

Joshua resolved to besiege them. And, on the first day of the feast, a the priests bearing the ark-which was surrounded by a party of armed men to protect it, while seven other priests marched in advance, sounding their horns—exhorted the army to valiance and made the circuit of the walls, followed by the council of elders. After merely those blasts from the priests-for beyond that they did nothing-they returned to the camp. For six days this was repeated, and on the seventh Joshua, having assembled the troops and all the people, announced to them the good news of the impending capture of the city, to wit that on that day God would deliver it to them and that, spontaneously and without effort on their part, the walls would collapse. Howbeit he charged them to slay all, whomsoever they caught, and neither through weariness, nor yielding to pity to desist from the slaughter of their enemies, nor yet while engaged in pillage to suffer the foe to escape. Nay, they were to destroy every living creature without taking aught to themselves for their private profit; but whatsoever there might be of silver or gold, that he commanded them to amass and reserve for God as choice first-fruits of their success, won from the first captured city. They were to spare only Rahab and her family in virtue of the oaths which had been made to her by the spies.

Josephus has traced a connexion between the seven days of blowing of trumpets, mentioned in Scripture, and the duration of the feast. Perhaps, however, he has used a text which, like the LXX Jos. vi. 12, read "on the second day, Joshua rose early, and the priests bore the ark, etc.," and taken it to mean the day after the eve of Passover, or the first full day of the festival.

Jos. vi. 19 adds " or brass or iron "; cf. § 32.

And Joshua delivered them to the priests to lay up in the treasuries. Such, then, was the end of Jericho.

(10) But a certain Achar, son of Zebedee, of the The sin tribe of Judah, having found a royal mantle all of Achar. woven of gold and a mass of gold of the weight of two hundred shekels, and thinking it cruel that he should deprive himself of the enjoyment of lucre, which he had won at his own peril, and bring and offer it to God, who had no need of it, dug a deep hole in his tent and buried his treasure therein. thinking to elude alike his comrades in arms and withal the eve of God.

(11) The place where Joshua had established his Joshua at camp was called Galgala. This name signifies Jos. v. 9. "freedom"; for, having crossed the river, they felt themselves henceforth free both from the Egyptians and from their miseries in the desert.

ii. 7. Moreover the etymological word-play in the Hebrew of Jos. vii. 25 presupposes the form Achar ('Ahar).

One of the historian's "free" etymologies, but perhaps taken over from others (Weill quotes the translation έλευθερία in Theodoret i. p. 199). Scripture derives the name Gilgal from the verb galal ("to roll") and adds the explanation "This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you" (by the reinstitution of the practice of circumcision).

(12) A few days after the downfall of Jericho, A defeat at Joshua sent three thousand men-at-arms to the city Jos. vii. 2. of Naia, a situated above Jericho, to capture it. These, being opposed by the Naietans, were routed and lost six-and-thirty men. The announcement of this news to the Israelites caused them great grief and dire despondency, not so much because of their kinship to the fallen, albeit they were all valiant and worthy men b who had perished, as from utter despair. For, believing themselves already masters of the country and that they would keep their army unscathed in the combats, even as God had promised heretofore, they now beheld their enemies unexpectedly emboldened. And so, putting sackcloth upon their apparel, they passed a whole day in tears and lamentation, without one thought for food, and in their vexation unduly magnified what had befallen.

(13) Seeing his army thus cast down and a prey Joshua's to gloomy forebodings concerning the whole cam- prayer. 7. paign, Joshua frankly appealed to God. "It was." he said, "from no confidence in ourselves that we were induced to subjugate this land by arms: nay, it was Moses, thy servant, who incited us thereto, he to whom by many tokens thou didst promise to vouchsafe to us to win this land, and ever to ensure to our army superiority in battle over our foes. And indeed some things have befallen in accordance with thy promises; but now, having suffered unlooked-for defeat, having lost some of our force, we are distressed at these things, which make thy 'Aïá-attested by the Latin version and perhaps original-promises and those predictions of Moses appear unsure; and yet more sorely are we pained at the thought of what the future holds in store, having met with such issue to our first assault. (14) Thus did Joshua, prostrated upon his face, Discovery make petition to God. And the response came from and death God, that he should arise and purge the army of the sinner pollution that had been wrought therein and of a Jos. vii. 6. daring theft of objects consecrated to Him, since 10 ff. that was the cause of their recent defeat; but were the culprit sought out and punished, they would for ever be assured of victory over their enemies. All this Joshua repeated to the people and, summoning Eleazar the high priest and the magistrates, he proceeded to draw lots for the several tribes. And when this revealed that the sacrilege issued from the tribe of Judah, he again had lots drawn for its several clans; and the true story of the crime was found to rest with the family of Achar. The inquiry being pursued further man by man, they caught Achar. And he, unable to make denial, being thus shrewdly circumvented by God, avowed his theft and produced the stolen goods before all. He was straightway put to death and at nightfall was given the ignominious burial proper to the condemned.a

editors. As M. Weill points out, Josephus doubtless adds the burial, unrecorded in Scripture, to indicate that the Mosaic law on stoning, which he has previously reported (iv. 202), was exactly followed; but he may already have found here some addition in his Biblical text which he interpreted as an allusion to burial.

(15) Joshua, having purified his army, now led Conquest them out against Naia, and, after posting ambus-Jos. viii, 3. cades during the night all about the town, at daybreak joined battle with the enemy. And when these advanced against them with an assurance begotten of their former victory, Joshua, feigning a retreat, drew them in this way to a distance from the town, they imagining themselves in pursuit of a beaten foe and being disdainful of them in anticipation of victory. Then, turning his forces about, he made them face their pursuers and, giving the prearranged signals to those in ambush, roused them also to the These flung themselves into the town, the occupants of which were around the ramparts, some wholly engrossed in watching their friends outside. So while they took the town and slew all whom they encountered, Joshua broke the ranks of his adversaries and forced them to flee. Driven in a body to the town which they supposed to be intact, when they saw that it too was taken and found that it was in flames, along with their wives and children, they scattered throughout the country, incapable through their isolation of offering resistance. Such being the fate that befell the Naietans, a crowd of children, women and slaves was taken, beside an immense mass of material. The Hebrews captured moreover herds of cattle and money in abundance, for the region was rich, and all this Joshua distributed to his soldiers, while he was at Galgala.

to Jerusalem, seeing the disasters that had befallen Ruse of the the inhabitants of Jericho and of Naia and suspecting Gabaonites. that they too would be visited by this dire fate, yet resolved not to implore mercy of Joshua; for they did not think to obtain any tolerable terms from a belligerent whose aim was the extermination of the whole race of the Canaanites. But they invited the Kephêrites and the Kariathiarimites, a their neighbours, to make alliance with them, telling them that neither would they escape this peril, should they themselves have first been conquered by the Israelites, whereas if they united their arms with theirs they might evade their violence. These overtures being accepted, the Gabaonites sent ambassadors to Joshua to make a league of amity, choosing those of their citizens whom they judged most capable of acting in the interests of the people. And these, deeming it hazardous to avow themselves Canaanites, and thinking to escape the peril of so doing by asserting that they had no connexion whatever with the Canaanites but lived very far away from them, declared that it was the tidings of his valour which had brought them thither, after accomplishing a long journey, and in proof of this statement they pointed to their apparel. Their garments, quite new when they set out, had (they said) been worn out by the length of their journey; for, to get them to believe this story, they had purposely clothed themselves in rags. So, standing amidst the host, they said that they had been sent by the Gabaonites and the neighbouring cities, very remote from that

So the envoys, having attained their end by guile, returned to their own people; but Joshua, having marched into the foothills of Canaan and learnt that the Gabaonites lived not far from Jerusalem and were of the stock of the Canaanites, sent for their magistrates and upbraided them for this fraud. When these alleged that they had no other means of salvation save that, and that they had therefore perforce had recourse to it, Joshua convoked the high priest Eleazar and the council; and, acting upon their judgement that they should be made public slaves, b so as to avoid violation of the oath, he appointed them to those functions. For such was their case, that from their countrymen they could await but destruction, while from those who had taken the field for the extermination of the Canaanite race they looked for salvation, thanks to the alliance which had been concluded. Joshua, with his whole army, sped to their assistance and, marching all day and night, at early dawn fell upon the foe, routed them and followed in pursuit down the slopes of the region called Bēthōra.a There too he was given to know of God's co-operation, manifested by thunder-claps, the discharge of thunderbolts and the descent of hail of more than ordinary magnitude. Ave and moreover it befell that the day was prolonged, to the end that night should not overtake them and check the Hebrews' ardour; insomuch that Joshua both captured the kings, who were hiding in a cave at Macchida, b and punished all their host. That the length of the day was increased on that occasion and surpassed the customary measure, is attested by Scriptures that are laid up in the temple.

(18) Having thus overthrown that league of kings who had set out to war against the Gabaonites, Joshua remounted into the hill-country of Canaan; battles, notably of the rout of a Roman legion at the opening

Their entire army amounted to 300,000 men-at-arms, 10,000 horsemen, and 20,000 chariots.d This host of enemies dismaved both Joshua himself and the Israelites, and in the excess of their fear they scarce durst hope for success. But God rebuked them for their terror and for crav-xi. 6. ing aught beyond His aid, promising them victory over their foes and bidding them put their horses out of action and to burn the chariots. Emboldened by these promises of God, Joshua set forth against the enemy, and on the fifth day e came upon them and engaged them: a fierce combat ensued and a carnage such that the tale of it would outrun belief. Advancing very far in pursuit, Joshua destroyed the monly but incorrectly (G. A. Smith) identified with the small lake Huleh, north of the Lake of Tiberias. The site of the battle is unknown; Josephus seems to identify it with one of the towns which he fortified during the war with Rome and which he calls elsewhere Mero(th) or Ameroth (B.J. ii. 573, iii. 39, Vita 188).

· Kedesh Naphtali, N.W. of the lake Huleh. d The numbers are imaginary: Scripture speaks only of "much people, even as the sand that is upon the seashore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.'

(20) Joshua, being now old and seeing that the Joshua's cities of the Canaanites were not lightly to be taken, the people by reason both of the strength of the sites on which at Shiloh. they stood and of the solidity of the walls with which the inhabitants had crowned the natural advantages of their towns, reckoning that their enemies would refrain from besieging what they despaired of capturing.-for the Canaanites, since they heard that it was for their destruction that the Israelites had made their exodus from Egypt, had spent all that time in fortifying their cities—Joshua, I say, called his xviii. 1. people together to Silo and summoned an assembly. Thither they sped with alacrity, and he spoke to them of the successes already achieved and the exploits accomplished, saying how fine they were and worthy of the Deity who had vouchsafed them and of the excellence of those laws which they were following: he recalled how one and thirty kings who xii. 24. had dared to close with them had been defeated, and how that vast army which once, over-confident xi. 1 ff. in its strength, a had joined battle with them, had been entirely destroyed, insomuch that not one family of theirs had survived. Of the cities too some had been taken, but seeing that for the capture of others there was need of time and great siege-works, owing to the strength of their ramparts and the confidence which this inspired in their inhabitants, he deemed it right that those from beyond Jordan xxii. 1. who had come to take part in their campaign and had shared their dangers as kinsmen, should now be dismissed to their homes with an expression of thanks for their aid in the task. "Furthermore," xviii. 4. said he, "we should send, one from each tribe, men of approved virtue, to measure out the land faith-

a The representatives of the tribes (§ 75), excluding the two (Reuben and Gad) for which complete provision had already been made on the east of Jordan. In this account of the division of the land Josephus departs from Scripture and presents a simpler, possibly an older, narrative. In Joshua, after a review of the allotment of land to the 2½ tribes beyond Jordan (chap. xiii.), we are given a preliminary allotment at Gilgal (xiv. 6) to Judah, Ephraim and the rest fully and without fraudulence and honestly to report to us what are its dimensions."

(21) Having delivered this speech and won the Mission of assent of the people thereto, Joshua sent out men the measurers to measure the country, attaching to them certain of the land. Jos. xviii. 8. expert surveyors, from whom by reason of their skill the truth would not be hid, instructions being given them to assess separately the extent of the favoured land and of that which was less fertile. For the nature of the land of Canaan is such that one may see plains, of great area, fully fitted for bearing crops, and which compared with another district might be deemed altogether blest, yet when set beside the regions of the people of Jericho and Jerusalem would appear as naught. Ave, though the territory of these folk happens to be quite diminutive and for the most part mountainous, yet for its extraordinary productiveness of crops and for beauty it yields to no other. And that was why Joshua held that the allotments should be fixed rather by valuation than by measurement, a single acre being often worth as much as a thousand. So xviii. 9. the men who had been sent, ten a in number, having compassed the land and valued it, in the seventh month b returned to him to the city of Silo, where the tabernacle had been set up.

of Manasseh (xv.-xvii.); then from Shiloh emissaries are sent out (3 from each tribe or 21 in all) to measure out the land for the remaining seven tribes, and the allotment for these tribes follows (xviii.-xx.). In Josephus there is no preliminary allotment at Gilgal: the apportionment for the 9½ tribes all takes place at Shiloh.

b Not in Scripture, which instead has a reference to the "seven portions" into which the land was divided by the emissaries (see last note).

will of God and the fashion in which He delights to be honoured. So, moved by indignation, they prepared to take the field; but Joshua and Eleazar the high priest and the elders restrained them, counselling them first to test their brethren's mind by a parley, and, should they find their intent mischievous, then and then only to proceed to hostilities. They sent therefore ambassadors to them, Phinees, xxii. 18. son of Eleazar, and with him ten others highly esteemed among the Hebrews, to discover what they could have meant by erecting that altar on the riverbank after they had passed over. So, the embassy having crossed the river and reached these people, an assembly was convened, and Phinees arose and said that their sin was too grave to be met by a verbal reprimand and an admonition for the future; howbeit, they themselves had not wished to look at the enormity of the crime so as to rush instantly to arms and violent measures, but, looking rather to their kinship and to the possibility that words might suffice to bring them to reason, they had undertaken this embassy. "We are here," said he, "in order that, having learnt what reason induced you to build this altar, we may on the one hand not be deemed precipitate in bearing arms against you, should ye have had some pious motive in erecting it, and on the other that we may take righteous vengeance, should the accusation prove true. we could not conceive that ye, with your experience of instruction in the will of God, ye who had been hearers of those laws which He Himself has given us, once parted from us and entering on your own heritage, which by the grace of God and His providential care for us has fallen to your lot, could have straightway forgotten Him and, abandoning the tabernacle and the ark and the altar of our fathers. introduced some strange gods and gone over to the vices of the Canaanites. Howbeit ve shall be in no wise held guilty, if ye repent and carry this madness no farther, but show that ye revere and are mindful of the laws of your fathers. Should ye, however, persist in your errors, we shall shun no toil in defence of those laws, but, crossing the Jordan, shall rally in support of them, ave and of God on their behalf, a deeming you in no wise different from the Canaanites but destroying you in like manner with them. For think not that by crossing the river ye have also passed beyond God's power: nay, everywhere ye are within His domain and escape from His authority and His vengeance is impossible. But if ye regard your coming hither a hindrance to sober living, there is nothing to prevent us b from making a redistribution of the land and abandoning this district to the grazing of sheep. Howbeit ye will do well to return to sanity and to change your ways while your sins are fresh. And we entreat you in the name of your children and wives not to constrain us to resort to force. Let, then, the thought that the salvation of your own selves and of them that are dearest to you hangs upon this assembly govern your deliberations, and reckon it more profitable to be defeated by words than to await the trial of deeds and of war."

charged, saying that neither would they renounce a their kinship to their brethren, nor had they erected the altar with revolutionary intent: nav, they recognized but the one God, owned by all Hebrews alike, and the brazen altar before the tabernacle whereon the sacrifices should be offered. As for that which they had now set up and which had brought suspicion upon them, they had not erected it for worship: "nay," said they, "but as a symbol and token for eternity of our kinship with you, and an obligation to think soberly and to abide by the laws of our fathers, in no wise as a beginning of transgression, as ye suspect. Howbeit Jd. i. 10. there remained yet a race of giants, who, by reason of their huge frames and figures in no wise like to the rest of mankind, were an amazing spectacle and a tale of terror to the ear. Their bones are shown to this day, bearing no resemblance to any that have come within men's ken. This town they gave to i. 20. the Levites as a choice boon, along with the tract of two thousand cubitse; but of the rest of the land they made, in accordance with the behests of Moses, a present to Caleb, who was one of the spies whom Moses had sent into Canaan. They gave also to the i. 16. descendants of Jethro the Madianite, the father-inlaw of Moses, territory for habitation; for, quitting their native country, they had followed the Hebrews and companied with them in the wilderness.

(4) The tribes of Judah and Simeon also captured the cities in the hill-country of Canaan, and among the soil and to labours thereon. And as their riches increased, under the mastery of luxury and voluntuousness, they recked little of the order of their constitution and no longer hearkened diligently to its laws. Incensed thereat, the Deity warned them by Jd. ii. 14. oracle, first that they had acted contrary to His will in sparing the Canaanites, and next that those foes, seizing their occasion, would treat them with great ruthlessness. But the Israelites, while despondent at this message from God, were yet ill-disposed for warfare, for they had won much from the Canaanites and luxury had by now unnerved them for fatigues. Aye, even that aristocracy of theirs was now becoming corrupted: no more did they appoint councils of elders or any other of those magistracies beforetime ordained by law, but lived on their estates, enslaved to the pleasures of lucre.a And so, by reason of this gross listlessness, grave discord again assailed them and they were launched into civil war through the following cause.

the more ardent in his passion, quarrels were continually arising between them, and at last the woman, utterly weary of them, left her husband and in the fourth month a rejoined her parents. But her husband, in sore affliction through love of her, visited her parents, redressed her grievances and was reconciled to her. For four days more he abode there, kindly treated by her parents, but on the fifth, having resolved to return to his home, he set off towards evening; for the parents were loth to part with their daughter and let the day slip away. A single servant accompanied them, and they had an ass on which the woman rode. Now when they were come over against Jerusalem, having already gone thirty furlongs, the servant counselled them to lodge somewhere, lest, journeying by night, some misadventure should befall them, above all when they were not far from foes, that hour oft rendering perilous and suspect even the offices of friends. The Levite, however, misliked the thought of seeking shelter with aliens-for the city was in Canaanite hands -preferring rather to proceed twenty furlongs further and to lodge in a town of the Hebrews; and, his counsel prevailing, he arrived at Gaba,d in the tribe of Benjamin, when evening had now fallen. No one in the market-place offering him hospitality, an old man returning from the fields, who though of the tribe of Ephraim was residing in Gaba, fell in with him and asked who he was and why he was setting off, when it was dark already, taking provisions for his supper. He replied that he was a of xix. 19. Levite and that he was escorting his wife from her parents back to his own home, informing him that he had his abode in the province of Ephraim. Thereat the old man, because of their common stock, and because they belonged to the same tribe and because chance had thus brought them together, took him as his guest to his own home. But some of the young xix. 22. men of Gaba, who had seen the woman in the market-place and admired her comeliness, when they learnt that she lodged with the old man, scorning the feebleness of these few, a came to the doors; and when the old man bade them begone and not to resort to violence and outrage, they required him to hand over his woman guest if he wished to avoid trouble. The old man replying that he b was a kinsman and a Levite and that they would be guilty of a dreadful crime in violating the laws at the beck of pleasure, they recked little of righteousness, mocked at it, and threatened to kill him if he thwarted their lusts. Driven to such a pass and unwilling to suffer his guests to be abused, he offered the men his own daughter, declaring that it would be more legitimate for them thus to gratify their lust than by doing violence to his guests, and for his part thinking by this means to avoid wronging those whom he had received. But they in no wise abated their passion for the stranger, being insistent in their demands to have her, and while he was yet imploring them to perpetrate no iniquity, they seized a the woman and, yielding still more to the force of their lust, carried her off to their homes and then, after sating their lewdness all night long, let her go towards the break of day. She, outworn with her woes, repaired to the house of her host, where, out of grief at what she had endured and not daring for shame to face her husband-since he above all, she deemed, would be inconsolable at her fate—she succumbed and gave up the ghost. But her husband, supposing his wife to be buried in deep sleep and suspecting nothing serious, tried to arouse her, with intent to console her by recalling how she had not voluntarily surrendered herself to her abusers, but that they had come to the lodginghouse and carried her off. But when he found that she was dead, chastened before the enormity of the wrong, he laid the dead woman upon his beast, bore her to his home and then, dividing her limb by limb into twelve pieces, sent one to each tribe, enjoining the bearers to state who they were who had caused the death of his wife and to recount the debauchery of the tribe.b

that they ought not so hurriedly to make war on their brethren, ere they had parleyed with them concerning their grievances, the law not permitting them to lead an army a even against aliens without having sent an embassy and made other attempts of this nature to bring the supposed wrongdoers to repentance. It therefore behoved them, in obedience to the law, to send envoys to the Gabaenians to demand the surrender of the culprits and, should they deliver them up, to be content with punishing these individuals; but, should they flout this demand, then to retaliate on them by resort to arms. So they sent an embassy to Gaba to accuse the xx. 12. young men of the woman's fate and to require the surrender for punishment of those that had done thus lawlessly and who for those very deeds deserved to die.c But the people of Gaba refused to surrender the youths and scorned to bow to the behests of others through fear of war, holding themselves to be inferior in arms to none whether in numbers or valour. So they proceeded to make great preparations along with the rest of their tribe, who joined them in their desperate undertaking in the belief that they were repelling aggressors.

(10) Now when word was brought to the Israelites Civil war of this response from the men of Gaba, they took Benjamites an oath that not one among them would give his defeat of daughter to a man of Benjamin and that they would Jd. xxi. 1. march against them, being more indignant against them than were our forefathers, as we are told. xx. 17.

against the Canaanites. And forthwith they led xx. 15 f. out against them their host of 400,000 men-at-arms; the forces of the Benjamites numbered but some 25,600 a among whom were 500 b expert in using the sling with the left hand. And so, a battle ensuing near Gaba, the Benjamites routed the Israelites, and there fell of these 22,000 men; indeed perchance yet more would have perished, had not night checked them and parted the combatants. The Benjamites then withdrew, exultant, to the town, the Israelites, crest-fallen at their defeat, to their camp. On the morrow, when they renewed the attack, the Benjamites were again victorious: 18,000 of the Israelites perished, and daunted by this carnage they abandoned their encampment. Repairing to Bethel, the city nearest at hand, o and xx. 26. having fasted on the morrow, they besought God, through Phinees the high priest, to abate his anger against them and, content with their two defeats, to vouchsafe them victory and the mastery over their foes. And God promised them their petitions through the mouth of Phinees, His interpreter.

(11) So, dividing their army in two, they set half Defeat in ambush around the town d under cover of night; Benjamites: the other half then engaged the Benjamites and reprisals before their onset retired. The Benjamites pursued Israelites.

and, as the Hebrews fell back little by little to a great distance, wishing them to come out a to a man, they followed their retreating foe, in such wise that even the old men and lads who had been left in the town as incompetent sallied out also, eager as a united body to crush the enemy. But when they were now remote from the town, the Hebrews staved their flight and, turning, stood their ground for battle, while they raised the concerted signal for their friends in ambush; and these, emerging with a shout, fell upon the enemy. The Benjamites, from the moment when they saw themselves entrapped, were in a hopeless plight: driven into a rugged hollow, they were there shot down by the darts of the Hebrews who stood around them, with the result that all perished save 600. These, rallying and closing up their ranks, pushed through the enemy's midst, fled for the neighbouring hills, and there, on gaining them, established themselves; all the rest, in number about 25,000, perished. The Israelites xx. 46. burnt Gaba and made away with the women and males under age; the other cities of the Benjamites they treated in like manner. Moreover, so exasper-xxi. 8. ated were they that, forasmuch as the town of Jabesh in Gilead had not aided them in battle against the Benjamites, they sent thither 12,000 men from their ranks, with orders to destroy it. This detachment massacred all of military age in the town, along with the children and all the women save 400 who were unmarried. To such lengths did their rage carry them,

"We grant you," said they, "the territory of the whole tribe and of booty b as much as ye can carry off." And the Benjamites, recognizing with contrition that their misfortunes were due to God's decree and to their own iniquity, came down again into the tribe of their fathers, in compliance with this invitation. The Israelites gave them for wives those 400 virgins from Jabesh, and then deliberated concerning the remaining 200 men, how they too might be provided with wives and beget children. Now, whereas they xxi. 18. had before the war made oath to give no Benjamite a daughter of theirs in wedlock, some were of opinion that they should disregard those oaths as having been sworn under the sway of passion, without reflexion or judgement; that they would be doing nothing in opposition to God, could they so save a

The hag here alluded to is the oldest of Jewish festivals, the autumn vintage festival of Sukkoth or "Tabernacles"; for its annual observance at Shiloh cf. I Sam. i. 3. whole tribe in danger of extinction; and that perjuries were not grave or hazardous when they were prompted by necessity, but only when rashly committed with malicious intent. When the elders, however, protested at the mere mention of perjury, someone said that he could suggest how to provide wives for these men and yet to keep their oaths. On being questioned concerning his plan, "When we meet," he replied, "three times a year a at Silo, we are accompanied to the festival by our wives and daughters. Let the Benjamites be permitted to capture as their brides such of these maidens as they can. without either encouragement or hindrance on our part. And if their parents make an ado and demand punishment, we will tell them that they have but themselves to blame for neglecting to protect their daughters, and that we must abate that resentment against the Benjamites, in which already in the past b we had been immoderate." The assembly assenting thereto decided accordingly to permit the Benjamites this marriage by capture. So, when the festival came round, the 200, in twos and threes. waited in ambush before the city for the coming of the maidens, in the vineyards and other places where they would escape their eye. Meanwhile the damsels, playfully and with no suspicion of what was on foot, came all unguardedly along; whereat the men sprang out upon them and seized them as they scattered. These Benjamites, thus wedded, then betook themselves to the labours of the soil

(iii. 1) But like sufferings also befell the tribe of The Danites Dan, the cause which brought it to this pass being forced to as follows. Now that the Israelites had abandoned northwards. the exercise of warfare and were given up to their labours on the land, the Canaanites, holding them in contempt, built up an army, not from expectation of any injury to themselves, but, being now confident of doing mischief to the Hebrews, they counted on henceforth inhabiting their cities in security. they proceeded to equip chariots and levy troops, their cities unanimously combined, and from the tribe of Judah they wrested Ascalon, Akkaron a and many other cities of the plain, while they forced the Jd. 1. 34. Danites to flee in a body to the hills, leaving them not the smallest foothold on the plain. bThese, in-xviii. 1 f. capable of fighting and not having land to suffice them, sent five of their number into the interior to look for a region whither they could migrate. to take pity on them and not to suffer them to be destroyed by the Canaanites. God thereupon promised them salvation and chose for general Barak of the tribe of Nephthali; barak denotes

"lightning" in the tongue of the Hebrews.

(3) Dabora then summoned Barak and charged him is. 6. to select ten thousand of the youth and to march against the foe: that number would, she said, suffice, God having prescribed it and betokened victory. But Barak declared that he would not take the command unless she shared it with him; whereto she indignantly replied, "Thou resignest to a woman a rank that God has bestowed on thee! Howbeit I do not decline it." Then, having mustered ten thousand, they pitched their camp on mount Itabyrion.a Sisares thereupon went to meet them at the king's orders and his army encamped not far from their foes. The Israelites and Barak were dismaved at the multitude of the enemy and resolved to retire, but were restrained by Dabora, who ordered them to deliver battle that very day, for they would be victorious and God would lend them aid.

ites were less hampered by the storm, which was at their back, and they took courage at the thought of this succour from God; and so, thrusting into the midst of the foe, they slew multitudes of them. Thus, some beneath the hand of the Israelites, others discomfited by their own cavalry, the enemy fell, many being crushed to death beneath the chariots. But Sisares, having leapt from his chariot when he saw that the rout was come, fled till he reached the abode of a woman of the Kenites a named Iale b: she, at his request to conceal him, took him in, and, when he asked for drink, gave him milk that had turned sour.º And he, having drunk thereof immoderately, fell asleep. Then, as he slumbered, Iale took an iron nail and drove it with a hammer through his mouth and jaw, piercing the ground; and when Barak's company a arrived soon after she showed him to them nailed to the earth. Thus did this victory redound, as Dabora had foretold, e to a woman's glory. But Barak, marching upon Asor, slew Jabin f who encountered him and, the general having fallen, razed the city to the ground; he then Of. v. 31. held command of the Israelites for forty years.9

being repeated for seven years, the more part of the Israelites withdrew to the hills and forsook the plains; and, making for themselves underground passages and caverns, they secured therein all that had escaped the enemy. For the Madianites, making their invasions in the height of summer, permitted the Israelites in winter to till the soil, that through their labours they might have somewhat to ravage. So there was famine and dearth of sustenance, and they turned in supplication to God, imploring Him to save them.

(2) Now Gedeon, son of Jas, one of the foremost b The call to among the tribe of Manasseh, used to bring his Jd. vi. 11. sheaves of corn and beat them out secretly in the winepress; for, because of the enemy, he feared to do this openly on the threshing-floor. To him there appeared a spectre in the form of a young man, who pronounced him blessed and beloved of God, whereto he made rejoinder: "Indeed, this is a signal proof of his favour that I am now using a winepress instead of a threshing-floor!" But when his visitor bade him take courage and essay to regain liberty, he replied that this was impossible, seeing that the tribe c to which he belonged was lacking in numbers and he himself but young and too feeble for exploits so great. Howbeit God promised Himself to supply what he lacked and to grant victory to the Israelites, should he put himself at their head.d

voung friends, Gedeon was trusted; and instantly Jd. vi. 34; there was an army of 10,000 a men ready for the vii. 2 ff. contest. But God, appearing to Gedeon in his sleep, b showed to him the proneness of human nature to self-love and the hatred that it bore to those of surpassing merit, and how, far from attributing the victory to God, they would regard it as their own, on the ground that they were a large army and a match for their enemies. In order, therefore, that they might learn that it was His aid that accomplished it, He counselled him towards midday, when the heat was most intense, to march his troops to the river; and then such of them as knelt d down to drink, them he should deem the stalwarts, but all who drank hurriedly and with trepidation, these he should rank as cowards and terrified of the foe. Gedeon having then done in accordance with this counsel of God, there were found 300 men who with fear and trembling raised the water in their hands to their lips; and these God bade him take with him to attack the enemy. f So they pitched their camp above the Jordan, with intent to cross on the morrow.

(4) But Gedeon being terror-struck, having withal Dream of a been divinely ordered to attack by night, God, with soldier.

e Some Mss. read "should deem that they had acted this way through cowardice."

The correct interpretation of the confused verses, Jd. vii. 5, 6, is probably that the 300 men who lapped the water with their tongues like dogs were those selected for battle, while those who knelt to drink were rejected. Josephus, taking the lapping to mean drinking "with trepidation, implies that the 300 were chosen "lest Israel vaunt themselves" (Jd. vii. 2), i.e. God could give victory even to a cowardly army.

intent to banish his fear, bade him take one of his soldiers and advance close up to the tents of the Madianites, since from the lips of the very foe he would derive courage and confidence. Obediently thereto he went, taking with him his servant Phruras.a and, on approaching one of the tents, found that its occupants were awake and that one of them was recounting to his companion a dream, in such fashion that Gedeon could hear it. Now the dream was on this wise: it seemed to him that a barley cake, too vile for man's consumption, came rolling through the camp and struck down the king's tent and those of all his soldiers. His comrade interpreted the vision to betoken the destruction of the army, stating what led him to understand it so: "Of all seeds (he said) that called barley is admitted to be the vilest: and of all Asiatic races that of the Israelites, as may be seen, has now become the most ignominious and like to the nature of barley. And among the Israelites at this moment the highspirited party can be none but Gedeon and his comrades-in-arms. Since, then, thou sayest that thou sawest that cake overturning our tents, I fear that God has conceded to Gedeon the victory over us."

(5) The hearing of this dream inspired Gedeon Defeat with high hopes and confidence, and he commanded Madianites. his men to be ready in arms, having also recounted Jd. vii. 16. to them this vision of the enemy; and they were alert to obey his orders, elated by what they had urging on their surviving soldiers, numbering some 18,000, a encamped when at a great distance from the Israelites. Gedeon, however, had not renounced the viii. 12. struggle, but, following in pursuit with his whole army, joined battle, annihilated the enemy, and brought back as prisoners the remaining chiefs, Zebes and Zarmunes.^b In the preceding combat there had fallen of the Madianites and of their 10. Arabian comrades-in-arms about 120,000; and abundant booty-gold, silver, woven stuff, camels and beasts of burden-fell to the Hebrews. Gedeon on 21. his return to Ephra, his native place, put the kings of the Madianites to death.

(6) But the tribe of Ephraim, aggrieved at Gedeon's The success, now resolved to march against him, com-aggrieved tribe of plaining that he had not informed them of his pro-Ephraim. posed assault on the enemy. Gedeon, however, being a man of moderation and a model of every virtue, replied that it was not of himself by an arbitrary decision d that he had attacked the foe without them, but by divine command; while the victory, he declared, belonged no less to them than to those who had taken the field. And by these words, with which he pacified their wrath, he did the Hebrews a greater service than by his military success; for he rescued them from civil strife when they were on the brink of it. Howbeit for its insolent attitude this tribe paid a penalty, which we shall relate in due season.

Abimelech then transformed the government into a tyranny, setting himself up to do whatsoever he pleased in defiance of the laws and showing bitter animosity against the champions of justice.

how the trees, once gifted with a human voice, held a meeting and besought a fig-tree a to rule over them. And when she refused, because she enjoyed the esteem which her fruits brought her, an esteem that was all her own and not conferred from without by others, the trees did not renounce their intention of having a ruler, but thought good to offer this dignity to the vine. And the vine, when so elected. on the same grounds as those of the fig-tree, declined the sovereignty. The olive-trees having done the like, a bramble—since the trees requested it to accept the kingship, and it is good in giving wood for tinder-promised to undertake the office and to act strenuously. However it behoved them all to sit down beneath her shadow, and should they plot her ruin they would be destroyed by the fire within her. "I tell this fable," said Jotham, "not for your 16. merriment, but because notwithstanding the manifold benefits that ye have received from Gedeon yeb suffer Abimelech to hold sovereign sway, after aiding him to slay my brethren. Ye will find him in no wise different from a fire." Having spoken thus he absconded and lived in hiding in the hills for three Of. 22. vears from fear of Abimelech.

(3) But not long after the festival the Shechemites, Expulsion of repenting of the murder of the sons of Gedeon, Jd. ix. 23. expelled Abimelech from their city and from their tribe; and he laid plans for doing the town an injury. So, when the season of vintage was come, they were afraid to go out and gather the fruit, for fear that Abimelech would do them some mischief. But on being visited by Gual, one of their chiefs, 26. with a retinue of troops and kinsmen, the Shechemites besought him to lend them protection during their vintage. And when he complied with their request, they went forth, accompanied by Gual at the head of his troop. So the fruit was safely gathered in, and while supping in companies they now ventured openly to revile Abimelech; and the chiefs, posting 25. ambuscades about the town, captured and slew

So Abimelech sat in ambush, while Gual all too unguardedly tarried in the suburbs, and Zabul with him. Spying some men-at-arms hastening up, Gual said to Zabul that men were upon them in arms. He replied that they were but shadows of the rocks; but on their nearer approach Gual, perceiving them perfectly, told him that these were no shadows but a company of men. Said Zabul, "But wert thou not accusing Abimelech of cowardice? Why then displayest thou not that mighty valour of thine by meeting him in combat?" fled to the town with the rest at his heels. Zabul 41. now contrived to secure Gual's expulsion from the town, charging him with feebleness in his encounter with Abimelech's troops.a However Abimelech. learning that the Shechemites proposed to come out again for the vintage, posted ambuscades all about the town; then, so soon as they emerged, a third of his force occupied the gates to cut off the citizens from re-entering, the rest chased them as they scattered, and there was carnage on all sides. Then, having razed the city to the ground-for it could not sustain a siege-he sowed salt over the ruins and pushed forward. And so perished all the Shechemites. As for such as had scattered across country and 46. escaped that peril, these mustering to a strongly entrenched rock established themselves thereon and were preparing to fortify it with a wall.^b But they were forestalled by Abimelech, who, hearing of their design, came upon them with his forces and laid faggots of dry wood round the place, carrying them with his own hands and bidding his troops to do the like. The rock being thus quickly encompassed, they set fire to the faggots, flinging in all the most inflammable materials, and raised an immense blaze. From that rock not a soul escaped: they perished with women and children, the men numbering some fifteen hundred, and a great many of the so foul a crime against a benefactor.a

(5) Abimelech, having terrorized the Israelites by Death of the miserable fate of the Shechemites, let it be seen Abimelech. that he was aspiring higher and would set no bound to his violence until he had exterminated all. So Jd. ix. 50. he marched upon Thebes b and carried the city with a rush; but finding there a great tower, wherein all the people had taken refuge, he made preparations to besiege it. And then, as he came rushing close beside the gates, a woman hurled a fragment of a millstone and struck him on the head. Prostrated to earth, Abimelech besought his armourbearer to slav him, lest his death should be deemed the work of this woman; and he obeyed his behest. Such was the penalty paid by Abimelech for the crime that he perpetrated on his brethren and for his outrageous treatment of the Shechemites; and the fate which befell these last fulfilled the prediction of Jotham. Abimelech's army for their part, on the fall of their chief, dispersed and returned to their homes.

he fell foul of a calamity far different from these fair xi. 34. achievements; for it was his daughter who met him, his only daughter, a virgin yet. Wailing in anguish at the greatness of the blow, a the father chid his daughter for her haste in meeting him, seeing that he had dedicated her to God. But she without displeasure learnt her destiny, to wit that she must die in return for her father's victory and the liberation of her fellow-citizens; she but asked him to grant her two months wherein to bewail her youth with her fellow-citizens, and thereafter he should do in accordance with his vow. He accorded her the respite aforesaid, and at its close sacrificed his child as a burnt-offering-a sacrifice neither sanctioned by the law nor well-pleasing to God; for he had not by reflection probed what might befall or in what aspect the deed would appear to them that heard of it.

(11) The tribe of Ephraim now took arms against Jephthah's him, because he had not imparted the news of his Ephraim. expedition against the Ammanites to them, but had Jd. xii. 1. reserved to himself alone the booty and the glory of the achievement. Thereto he replied first that they were not unaware that their kinsfolk were beset and that when called upon for aid they had not come, whereas they ought, even before being asked, to have learnt of the matter and sped to arms; next that this was an iniquitous enterprise of theirs, after not having dared to face the foe, to rush upon their kinsmen; and he threatened, God helping, to be avenged on them unless they showed themselves reasonable. Failing, however, to influence them, he met them, when they came, with an army

Now the Thamnites, on the occasion of the wedding feast-for he entertained them all-from fear of this young man's strength, presented him with thirty of their chief stalwarts, ostensibly as companions, in reality as his guardians, lest he should be minded to create any disturbance; and, when the drinking was far gone and joviality prevailed, as is customary on such occasions, Samson said, "Come, I will propound a riddle, and if ye solve it after seven days' search, ye shall receive every man from me fine linen and apparel as a reward for your sagacity." Ambitious to win at once a renown for sagacity and a prize, they begged him to state it, whereupon he said: "The omnivorous eater produced pleasant meat from himself though grossly unpleasant." c When the Philistines at the end of three days were unable to discover what it meant, they urged the damsel to find out from her husband and report to them: nay, they threatened to burn her should she fail to do so. Samson, upon the damsel's entreating him to tell her, at first resisted, but, when she pressed him and burst into tears and protested that his refusal to tell her proved his want of affection for her, he revealed the story of the slaying of the lion and how he had carried off the three honeycombs sprung from its carcase and brought them to her. Suspecting no fraud he recounted all, but she betrayed his story to her questioners. So on the seventh day, whereon they were required to give him the answer to the riddle, assembling before sunset they announced, "Nothing is more unpleasant to meet than a lion nor more pleasant to taste than honey." And Samson added, "Nor is ought more deceitful than a woman who betrays our speech to you." a And he gave them what he had promised, after despoiling certain Ascalonites who encountered him on the road (these too being Philistines); but he renounced those nuptials, and the girl, scorning him for his wrath, was united to that friend of his who had given her away.b

These pleading that it was unjust to exact punishment for Samson's misdeeds from them that paid them tribute, the Philistines retorted that if they would keep clear of blame they must deliver Samson into their hands. And they, wishing to be above reproach, visited the rock with three thousand men-at-arms, and after roundly rebuking him for his outrageous treatment of the Philistines, people powerful enough to bring ruin upon the whole race of the Hebrews, and telling him that they were come to take and deliver him into their hands, they besought him to submit to this of his own free will. And he, after receiving an oath from them that they would do no more than merely commit him to the hands of the foe, descended from the rock and put himself at the mercy of these representatives of the tribe; and they, having bound him with two cords, led him off to deliver him to the Philistines. Then, when they were come to a spot which to-day is called Jawbone b by reason of the exploit there performed by Samson but which of old was nameless, the Philistines being encamped not far off and coming to meet them with exultant cries, thinking to have achieved their end, Samson, bursting his bonds asunder and seizing the

But, being seized with a mighty thirst and recognizing that human valour is a thing of naught, he acknowledged that all was attributable to God and implored Him not, in anger at any words of his, to deliver him into his enemies' hands, but to lend him aid in his dire need and to rescue him from his distress. And God, moved by his supplications, caused a spring of water to well out of a rock, sweet and abundant; whence it was that Samson called that place Jawbone, a name which it bears to this day.a

Jd. xvi. 4. proved the beginning of his disaster. For, being enamoured of a woman who was a harlot among the Philistines, Dalala a by name, he consorted with her; and the presidents of the Philistine confederacy came and induced her by large promises to discover from Samson the secret of that strength which rendered him invulnerable to his foes. So she, over their cups and in like intercourse, by admiration of his exploits would craftily seek to discover by what means he had come by such extraordinary valour. But Samson, whose wits were yet robust, countered Dalala's ruse by another, telling her that were he bound with seven vine-shoots still flexible, b he would be the weakest of men. At the moment she held her peace, but, after reporting this to the lords of the Philistines, she posted some soldiers in ambush within and while Samson was drunken bound him with the shoots as firmly as possible, and then awoke him with the announcement that men were upon But he burst the shoots asunder and made ready for defence as though his assailants were coming. And then this woman, with whom Samson was continually consorting, would say that she took it ill that he had not confidence enough in her affection for him to tell her just what she desired, as though she would not conceal what she knew must in his interests not be divulged. cords he would lose his strength; and when she had tried this too with no success, a third time he advised her to weave his locks into a web. But when even by this experiment the truth was not discovered, at last, at her petitions, Samson—since he must needs fall a victim to calamity—wishing to humour Dalala said: "I am under God's care: and under His 17. providence since birth, I nurse these locks, God having enjoined upon me not to cut them, for that my strength is measured by their growth and preservation." The secret learnt, she reft him of his locks and delivered him to his enemies, being now powerless to repulse their assault; and they, having put out his eyes, delivered him over to be led away in chains.

(12) But in course of time Samson's locks grew; Samson's and once when the Philistines were keeping a public Jd. xvi. 22. festival and their lords and chief notables were feasting together in one place—a hall with two columns supporting its roof—Samson at their summons was led to the banquet, that they might mock at him over their cups. left her country, thought to repair thither again, for she had learnt that all was now going well with it. But her daughters-in-law had not the heart to be parted from her, nor for all her pleading when they were fain to set out with her a could she prevail with them; then, as they urged her yet, she prayed that they might find happier wedlock than that whereof they had been disappointed in marrying her sons, and obtain all blessings beside, but, seeing the case in which she lay, she implored them to remain where they were and not to crave to share her uncertain fortunes in quitting their native land. So Orpha stayed, but, since Ruth would not be persuaded, Naamis took her with her, to be her partner in all that should befall.

Ruth by permission of her mother-in-law went out to glean, to provide for their sustenance, and by chance came to the ground of Boaz. Boaz arriving a little later and seeing the young woman, questioned the steward of his estate concerning this child; and he, having just learnt all her story from herself, informed b This statement, which appears inconsistent with the sequel, and is absent from other Biblical texts, recurs in the Armenian version, which appends to Ruth ii. 1 "et dedit Noomin domum viduitatis habitare in ea." We must suppose that Boaz provided a lodging but did not meet his guests.

his master. And Boaz, alike for her loyalty to her mother-in-law and for her a remembrance of that son of hers to whom she had been united, bade her welcome and wished her enjoyment of blessings: he would not have her glean but permitted her to reap and carry away all that she could; while he charged his steward in no wise to hinder her and to provide her with lunch and drink when he fed the reapers. But Ruth, having received of him barley-meal, kept ii. 14, 18. thereof for her mother-in-law and brought it to her, on her return at even, along with her sheaves; while Naamis on her side had reserved for her portions of some food with which attentive neighbours had provided her.^b Ruth also recounted to her mother-in-law what Boaz had said to her. And Naamis having told her that he was a kinsman and might haply for piety's sake take care of them, she went out again on the following days to glean with the handmaids of Boaz.

(3) Not many days later Boaz himself came and, Boaz and when the winnowing of the barley was done, slept threshing. on the threshing-floor. On learning of this, Naamis floor. schemed to bring Ruth to his side, deeming that he would be gracious to them after consorting with the child; so she sent the damsel to sleep at his feet. And she, regarding it as a pious duty in nothing to gainsay the behests of her mother-in-law, repaired thither, and at the moment escaped the eye of Boaz, who was fast asleep; but, awaking towards midnight and becoming aware of the woman lying beside him, he inquired who she was. her, he for the time held his peace; but at davbreak, ere his servants began to move to their work. he roused her and bade her take as much of the barley as she could carry and be off to her motherin-law, before anyone should see that she had slept there, since it was wise to guard against scandal of that kind, and the more so when nothing had passed. "But as concerning the whole matter," said he, "thus shall it be. He that is nearer of kin (to thee) than I,a must be asked whether he would have thee to wife: if he says yea, thou shalt follow him: if he declines, I will take thee for my lawful bride."

(4) Ruth having reported this to her mother-in-Marriage of law, they were well content, in the expectation that Boaz and Boaz would take them under his care. Maalon's young wife is come hither: if thou wouldest retain those lands, thou must marry her in accordance with the laws." He, however, renounced both the heritage and the woman to Boaz, who was himself likewise a kinsman of the dead, on the plea that he had a wife and

And as she lingered a long time over her prayers, 12. Eli the high priest, who was seated at the entrance of the tabernacle, taking her for a drunkard, bade her begone. But, on her replying that she had drunk but water and that it was for grief at the lack of children that she was making supplication to God, he exhorted her to be of good cheer, announcing that God would grant her children.

"Those on the spot" is the usual sense of the verb in Josephus and it has been so used twice just above ("Here am I," "thou art there"); others here render "anyone"

("any chance persons").

^a Cf. 1 Sam. ii. 30 ff.: the prophecy there made to Eli himself was, according to Scripture, fulfilled under king Solomon, when Abiathar of the house of Ithamar was replaced by Zadok of the house of Eleazar (1 Kings ii. 27, 35; A, viii. 11).

Phinees was already acting as high priest, his father having made way for him by reason of old age.d Confidence then mightily revived among the Hebrews, who hoped through the coming of the ark to get the better of their enemies, while the enemy were in consternation, dreading that presence of the ark among the Israelites. came, that victory for which the Hebrews hoped went to the Philistines, and that defeat which these feared was sustained by the Hebrews, who learnt that their trust in the ark had been in vain. For soon as ever they closed with the enemy they were routed and lost some thirty thousand men, among the fallen being the sons of the high priest; and the ark was carried

And Eli the high priest, who was sitting at one of the two gates on a lofty seat, hearing the wails and surmising that some grave disaster had befallen his offspring, sent for the young man; and when he learnt the issue of the battle, he bore with moderate composure the fate of his sons and that which had happened to the army, seeing that he had known beforehand from God and had forewarned them of that which was to come, for men are affected most by those shocks that fall unexpectedly. But when he heard moreover that the ark had been captured by the enemy, in an agony of grief at this unlooked for tidings, he tumbled from his seat and expired, having lived ninety and eight years in all and for 15. forty a of them held supreme power.

(i. 1) THE Philistines, having captured their enemies' The ark in ark, as we have said a while ago, carried it to the and the city of Azotus a and placed it as a trophy beside plagues their own god, who was called Dagon. But on the therefrom. morrow, when all at break of day entered the temple to adore their god, they found him doing the like to the ark; for he lay prostrate, having fallen from the pedestal whereon he had always stood. So they lifted him and set him again thereon, sore distressed at what had passed. But when oft-times b visiting Dagon they ever found him in a like posture of prostration before the ark, they were plunged into dire perplexity and dismay. And in the end the Deity launched upon the city of the Azotians and upon their country destruction and disease. For they died of dysentery, c a grievous malady and inflicting most rapid dissolution, or ever their soul by blessed death was parted from the body, for they brought up their entrails all consumed and in every way corrupted by the disease. mice, a coming up from beneath, ravaged it all, sparing neither plant nor fruit. Being, then, in this evil plight and powerless to withstand their calamities, the Azotians understood that it was from the ark that they arose and that their victory and the capture of this trophy had not been for their welfare. They therefore sent to the men of Ascalon b and begged them to receive the ark into their keeping. And these, listening not unwillingly to the request of the Azotians, consented to do them this service; but no sooner had they taken the ark than they found themselves in the like woes, for the ark carried along with it the plagues of the Azotians to those who received it from their hands. So the Ascalonites rid themselves of it, sending it off to others. But neither did it abide with these, for, being beset by the same sufferings, they dismissed it to the neighbouring cities. And on this wise the ark went the round of the five cities of the Philistines, exacting from each, as it were toll for its visit to them, the ills which it caused them to suffer.

(2) Exhausted by these miseries, the victims, Delibera-whose fate was becoming a lesson to all who heard of decision and it never to receive this ark among them at such a of the meed and price, henceforth sought ways and means C. 1 Sam. to get rid of it. So the lords of the five cities—Gitta, vi. 1. Akkaron, Ascalon, along with Gaza and Azotus—a Josephus agrees with the LXX in mentioning the mice at this point: the Hebrew text only alludes to them later (vi. 4 f.).

b In Scripture, after a meeting of the lords of the Philistines, the ark is sent first to Gath and then to Ekron (LXX Ascalon).

^a In Scripture (vi. 2) the Philistines summon "the priests and the diviners," who propose the course which is followed. The meeting described in Josephus, with the views of the three parties, is an invention of the "Sophoclean" assistant: for a similar conflict of opinions cf. A. iii. 96 ff., where, as 168

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, VI. 8-10

met to deliberate what they ought to do.a Their first resolution was to send the ark back to its own people, inasmuch as God was championing its cause and that was why these horrors had accompanied it and burst along with it into their cities. But there were others who said that they should not do thus nor be deluded into attributing the cause of their misfortunes to the ark: it possessed no such power and might, for, were it under the care of God, it would never have fallen into the hands of men. Their advice was to sit still and to bear these accidents with equanimity, accounting their cause to be no other than nature herself, who periodically produces such changes in men's bodies, in earth, and in plants and all the products of earth. However, both these proposals were defeated by the counsel of men who in times past had obtained credit for superior intelligence and sagacity, and who now above all seemed to say just what befitted the occasion. Their verdict was neither to send back the ark nor to detain it, but to dedicate to God five images b of gold, 4. one on behalf of each city, as a thank-offering c to Him for His care for their salvation and for having kept them in the land of the living when they were like to be harried out of it by plagues which they could no longer face, and withal as many golden mice like to those that had overrun and ruined their here (§ 9), one party is for retaining composure $(\pi \rho \phi \omega s)$. This assistant's love of trichotomy extends to details, e.g. the τρίοδος (§ 11) and the division of the 5 cities into 3+2 by the insertion of $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\iota$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$ (§ 8).

country. Then, having placed these in a coffer and set it upon the ark, they should make for this a new wain, and should voke thereto kine that had freshly calved, and should shut up and retain the calves, in order that these might not retard their mothers by following them, and they, through yearning for their young, might make the more speed upon their way. Then having driven them, drawing the ark, out to a place where three roads met, they should there leave them, suffering them to take which of the roads they would. Should the kine take the route to the Hebrews 9. and mount into their country, they must regard the ark as the cause of all these ills; but should they turn elsewhere, "then," said they, "let us pursue after it, having learnt that it possesses no such power."

Then, having taken down the ark and the vessel containing the images and the mice, they set them upon a rock which stood in the plain, and, after offering splendid sacrifice to God and keeping merry feast, consumed wagon and kine as a burnt-offering. (4) Howbeit, the wrath and indignation of God The penalty visited seventy b of them of the village of Bethes, the ark: its whom He smote and slew for approaching the ark; its which, not being priests, they were not privileged to touch. The villagers bewailed these victims, raising over them lamentation such as was fitting over a God-sent evil, and each man mourned for his own. Then, pronouncing themselves unworthy of retaining the ark among them, they sent word to the general assembly d of the Hebrews that the ark had been restored by the Philistines. And these, on hearing vii. 1. thereof, conveyed it away to Kariathiareim, and since there lived there a man of the stock of Levi, Aminadab, reputed for his righteousness and piety, they brought the ark into his house, as to a place beseeming God, being the abode of a righteous man. This man's sons a tended the ark and had the charge of it for twenty years; for it remained all that time at Kariathiareim, after spending four months b among the Philistines.

So the prophet Samuel, seeing 1 Sam. vii. 2. their ardour and reckoning the occasion meet, while they were of this mind, to speak to them of liberty and the blessings that it brings, addressed them in words which he deemed most apt to win and to persuade their hearts. "Sirs," said he, "ye who yet to-day have grievous enemies in the Philistines, albeit God is beginning to be gracious to you and a friend, ve ought not to be content to yearn for liberty, but should do also the deeds whereby ye may attain it, nor merely long to be rid of your masters, while continuing so to act that they shall remain so. Nay, be ye righteous and, casting out wickedness from your souls and purging them,d turn with all your hearts to the Deity and persevere in honouring Him. Do ye but so and there will come prosperity, deliverance from bondage and victory over your foes, blessings which are to be won neither by arms nor

Then, taking a sucking lamb, he sacrificed it on behalf of the throng and besought God to extend His right hand over them in the battle with the Philistines and not suffer them to undergo a second reverse. And God hearkened to his prayers and, accepting the sacrifice in gracious and befriending spirit, gave them assurance of victory and triumph. God's victim was still upon the altar vii. 10. and He had not yet wholly consumed it through the sacred flame, when the enemy's forces issued from their camp and drew up for battle, expectant of victory, thinking to have caught the Jews b in a hopeless plight, seeing that they were without arms and had assembled there with no intention of battle. But the Philistines encountered what, had one foretold it, they would scarcely have believed. For, first, God vexed them with earthquake, crocking and making tremulous and treacherous the ground beneath them, so that from its reeling their footsteps staggered and at its parting they were engulfed in sundry of its chasms. Next He deafened them with thunderclaps, made fiery lightning to flash around them as it were to burn out their eyes, struck the arms from their hands, and so turned them weaponless to flight. But Samuel now rushed upon them with his people and, having massacred many, pursued them to a certain place called Korraea d; and there he set up who yet owed them an accounting for past injuries. These words sorely grieved Samuel by reason of his innate righteousness and his hatred of kings; for he was keenly enamoured of aristocratic government, accounting it divine and productive of bliss to those who adopted it. but pressed him importunately and insisted that he should elect their king forthwith, and take no thought for the future; since for the punishment of their foes they must needs have one to fight their battles with them, and there could be nothing strange, when their neighbours were ruled by kings, in their having the same form of government. So Samuel, seeing that even by his predictions they were not turned from their intent but persisted therein, said, "For the present, depart ve each to his home: I will summon you at need, when I shall have learnt from God whom

Scripture does not say that Samuel accepted no reward. 190

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, VI. 47-51

Saul replied that, if they went to the prophet, they had nothing to offer him in return for his oracle, since their supplies were by now exhausted. However, the servant said that he had a quarter of a shekel and would present that-for their ignorance that the prophet accepted no reward misled them a-and so they went and, meeting at the gates maidens going to draw water, they asked them which was the prophet's house. And these pointed it out and bade them make speed ere he sat down to supper, for he was entertaining many and would take his seat before his invited guests. b Now the reason why Samuel had at that hour assembled so many to the feast was this: he had been praying daily to God to reveal to him whom He would make king and, on the day before, God had announced him, saying that He would Himself send him a young man of the tribe of Benjamin at that selfsame hour. So, seated upon the housetop, Samuel was awaiting the coming of the time, and when the hour was ripe he descended to go to the supper. And he met Saul, and God revealed to him that this was he that was to rule. But Saul approached Samuel and greeting him prayed him to show him the prophet's house, for he said that as a stranger he was ignorant of it. Samuel then told him that he was the prophet and led him to the supper, assuring him that the asses in quest of which he had been sent were safe and that for him (Saul) were destined all good things c; whereat Saul broke in, "Nay, master, I am too lowly to hope for this, I come of a Howbeit the prophet led him to the banquet-chamber, gave him and his attendant places above the invited guests, who were seventy a in number, and charged his henchmen to set a royal portion before Saul. Then, when bedtime came, the rest arose and departed each to his own home, but Saul and his servant slept at the prophet's house.

(4) Samuel now called the people together to the The city of Masphatha and made them an address, which assembly at Mizpah. he delivered, as he told them, at the commandment 1 Sam. x. 17. of God. He said that, albeit God had granted them liberty and enslaved their enemies, they had been unmindful of His benefits and rejected His sovereignty, unaware that it was to their highest interest to have the best of all rulers at their head and that the best of all was God; nay, they chose to have a man for their king, who would treat his subjects as chattels at his will and pleasure and at the impulse of his other passions, indulging his power to the full; one who, not being the author and creator of the human race, would not lovingly study to preserve it, while God for that very reason would cherish it with care. "Howbeit," he added, "since it pleases you thus, and this intent to outrage God has prevailed, range yourselves all of you by tribes and families b and cast lots."

(5) The Hebrews having so done, the lot fell to Saul chosen the tribe of Benjamin, and when lots had been cast 1 Sam, x, 20, for it the family called Matris a was successful; and lots being cast for the individuals of that family Saul son of Kis obtained the kingdom. Learning thereof, the young man promptly took himself away, not wishing, I imagine, to appear eager to take the sovereignty. Nay, such was the restraint and modesty b displayed by him that, whereas most persons are unable to contain their joy over the slightest success but rush to display themselves before all the world. he, far from showing any such pride on obtaining a kingdom and being appointed lord of all those mighty peoples, actually stole away from the view of his future subjects and forced them to search for him, not without trouble. These being baffled and perplexed at Saul's disappearance, the prophet besought God to show where the young man was and to bring him before their eyes. And having learnt from God the place where Saul lay in hiding, he sent to fetch him and, when he was come, set him in the midst of the throng. And he overtopped them all and in stature was indeed most kingly.

Pitching his camp near the capital of his enemies, to 1 Sam. xi. 2 wit Jabis, he sent envoys to them, bidding them instantly to surrender on the understanding that their right eyes would be put out: if not, he threatened to besiege and overthrow their cities: it was for them to choose, whether they preferred the cutting out a small portion of the body or to perish utterly. The Galadenians, terror-struck, durst not reply at all to either proposal, whether they would surrender or whether they would fight; but they asked for a seven days' respite, in order to send envoys to their countrymen and solicit their support: if assistance were forthcoming they would fight, but if there should be no hope from that quarter, they undertook to deliver themselves up to suffer whatsoever should seem good to him.

(2) Naas, contemptuous of these Galadenian people Saul learns and their answer, gave them their respite and per-Gileadites mission to send to whatever allies they would. They i Sam. xi. 4. therefore straightway sent messengers to each city of the Israelites to report the menaces of Naas and the desperate straits whereto they were reduced. These, on hearing of the plight of the men of Jabis, were moved to tears and grief, but, beyond that, fear permitted them to do no more. When, however, the messengers reached the city of king Saul and recounted the peril wherein they of Jabis lay, the people here too were moved even as were those others, for they bewailed the calamity of their brethren; but Saul, entering the city from his labours in husbandry, encountered his fellow-citizens in tears and, on asking the reason for their distress and dejection, learnt the messengers' report. Thereon, divinely inspired, he dismissed the men from Jabis with a promise to come to their aid on the third day and ere sunrise to defeat the foe, so that the ascending sun should see them already victors and freed from their fears. Some, however, among them he bade remain with him so that they might guide him on his march.

(3) Then wishing to urge the people, through fear of the penalty, to the war against the Ammanites and that they might come together more quickly he cut the sinews b of his own oxen and threatened to do the like to the beasts of all who should fail to appear at the Jordan in arms on the following day and follow him and Samuel the prophet whithersoever they should lead them. But when they, through fear of the threatened penalty, mustered at the appointed hour, he had the host numbered at the 1 Sam xi. 8 city of Bala a and found them to have gathered together to the number of 700,000, apart from the tribe of Judah: of that tribe there were 70,000. For, not content with having rescued the inhabitants of Jabis. he invaded the country of the Ammanites, subdued it all, and, having taken much booty, returned in glory to his own land.º The people, in their delight at Saul's achievements, exulted at having elected such a king, and, turning upon those who had declared that he would bring no profit to the state, they cried, "Where now are those men?", "Let them pay for it!"in short all that a crowd, elated by success, is wont to utter against those who were of late disparaging the authors of it. But Saul, while welcoming their goodwill and devotion to himself, yet swore that he would not suffer one of his countrymen to be put to death that day, for it were monstrous to defile that Godgiven victory with bloodshed and murder of men of a The schoenos varied in length between thirty and forty stades, that is, roughly between four and five miles. The length of Saul's march, not given in Scripture, was, therefore, between forty and fifty miles. The distance between the supposed sites of Bezek and Jabesh Gilead is less than twenty miles.

all assembled at the city of Galgala, b for thither had Saul king. he bade them come. So yet again, in the sight of all the people, the prophet anointed Saul with the holy oil, and for the second time proclaimed him king. And thus was the government of the Hebrews transformed into a monarchy. For under Moses and his disciple Joshua, who was commander-in-chief, they remained under aristocratic rule: after Joshua's death for full eighteen years the people continued in a state of anarchy: whereafter they returned to their former polity, entrusting supreme judicial authority to him who in battle and in bravery had proved himself the best; and that is why they called this period of their political life the age of Judges.

(5) Samuel the prophet now called an assembly of Samuel's the Hebrews and said: "I adjure you by the most the people. High God, who brought those excellent brothers, I 1 Sam. xii. 1 mean Moses and Aaron, into this world, and rescued our fathers from the Egyptians and bondage beneath their yoke, that without showing favour through respect, without suppressing aught through fear, without giving room to any other feeling, ye tell me if I have done anything sinister and unjust through love of lucre or cupidity or out of favour to others.

For the Philistines, in their subjugation of the Jews, 19. had deprived them of their arms and occupied the strongest positions in the country with garrisons, further forbidding the vanquished to carry any weapon of iron or to make any use at all of iron. In consequence of this interdict, whenever the peasantry needed to repair any of their tools, ploughshare or mattock or other agricultural instrument, they would go to the Philistines to do this. So when the Philis- 5. tines heard of the destruction of their garrison, infuriated and deeming such scorn of them a monstrous affront, they marched against the Jews with 300,000 footmen, $\delta$ 30,000 chariots, and 6000 horse to support them, and pitched their camp beside the city of Machma. the Hebrews, came down to the city of Galgala and sent heralds throughout all the country to call up the people in the name of liberty to the war against the Philistines, belittling and disparaging their strength as inconsiderable and not such that they need fear to hazard battle with them. Samuel bade him wait 1 Sam. xiii. where he was and make ready victims for sacrifice, for after six days he would come to him, that so they x. s. might sacrifice on the seventh day and, that done, join battle with the enemy. So Saul waited awhile as the prophet had enjoined upon him; then, however, he would observe his command no longer, but when he saw that the prophet tarried and that his own soldiers were deserting him, he took the victims and xiii. 9. performed the sacrifice himself. Then, hearing that Samuel was approaching, he went out to meet him. But the prophet told him that he had not done rightly in disobeying his injunctions and anticipating his advent: he was paying that visit in accordance with the will of the Deity to preside at the prayers and the sacrifices on behalf of the people, and now he had forestalled him by having offered sacrifice wrongly and by his precipitate haste. Thereat Saul excused himself, saying that he had waited during those days which Samuel had appointed, but that necessity, the desertion of his terrified troops, the enemy's encampment at Machma and a report of their intended descent upon him at Galgala, had impelled him to speed the sacrifice. Then Samuel rejoining, "Nay, but for thy part," said he, "hadst thou been righteous and not disobeved me nor lightly regarded the counsels which God has given me touching the present matter, by acting more hastily than befitted the matter, then would it have been given thee to reign exceeding long, and to thy posterity as well." Most of his men had no arms, the country being desti- 1 Sam. xiii. tute of iron and of men capable of forging arms; for the Philistines had prohibited this, as we said just now. And now, dividing their army into three companies and advancing by as many routes, the Philistines proceeded to ravage the country of the Hebrews under the eyes of Saul, their king, and of his son Jonathan, who, with but six hundred followers, were powerless to defend their land. Seated on a lofty hill, Saul and his son and the high priest Achias,d a descendant of Eli the high priest, as they watched the devastation of the land, were in a state of deepest anguish. Saul's son then proposed to his armour-bearer that Jonathan's they should secretly sally out alone into the enemy's exploit.

camp and create confusion and panic among them. When the armour-bearer replied that he would gladly follow whithersoever he led, though it were to his death, Jonathan, having gained the young man's support, descended from the hill and set off towards the enemy. Now the enemy's camp lay on a cliff, enclosed in a ring of rocks, with three a peaks tapering to a long narrow ridge and serving as a bulwark to beat off all attacks. Consequently it came about that no care had been taken to guard the camp, because nature had given the place security and it was believed to be absolutely impossible for any man not merely to scale those crags but even to approach them. When therefore they were nearing the encampment, Jonathan encouraged his armour-bearer, saying: "Now let us attack the enemy; and if, on seeing us, they bid us mount up to them, take that for a presage of victory, but if they utter not a word, as though they invited us not, let us then return." But, as they drew nigh to the enemy's camp, just at the dawn of day,b the Philistines espied them and said one to another, "Here are the Hebrews coming out of their holes and caverns," and then to Jonathan and his armourbearer, "Come on," they cried, "come up to us, to receive the due punishment for your audacity." ^a Details of the fight are an amplification, in harmony with Josephus's rationalizing tendency.

The unscriptural details about the rocks are perhaps suggested by the lxx rendering, in some MSS. (ἐν πετροβόλοις), of the obscure Hebrew text of 1 Sam. xiv. 14.

had been sighted by the enemy and, turning aside Philistines. from it, reached the rock which by reason of its 12. strength had been left destitute of guards. Thence, creeping up with great labour, they forced their way over the difficulties of the ground and mounted up to the enemy; falling upon these as they slept, they slew some twenty of them and filled the host with such tumult and alarm, that some flung off all their arms and fled, while the more part, not recognizing their comrades, because of the many nationalities of which their army was composed, and taking each other for enemies-for they did not suppose that there had come up against them two only of the Hebrews—they turned to fight one another.a some of them perished by the sword, others as they fled were driven over the rocks and hurled headlong.b

(3) Saul's spies having now reported to the king Saul's that there was a commotion in the camp of the allegiance. Philistines, Saul inquired whether any of his men had 1 Sam. xiv. gone from him. Then, on hearing that his son and, with him, his armour-bearer were absent, he ordered the high priest to don his high-priestly robes c and to prophesy to him what would befall. The high priest having declared that it would be victory and triumph over his enemies, the king set off against the Philistines and fell upon them while they were yet panic-stricken and massacring one another. Moreover those who earlier had taken refuge in the tunnels and caves, on hearing that Saul was victorious, came streaming toward him; and with now some ten thousand a Hebrews at his back, he pursued the enemy scattered over the whole countryside. But, whether through exultation at a victory so unexpected—for men are apt to lose control of reason when thus blest by fortune—or through ignorance, b he rushed into a dreadful and very blameworthy deed. For, in his desire to avenge himself and to exact punishment from the Philistines, he invoked a curse upon the Hebrews, that should any man desist from slaughtering the foe and take food, before oncoming night should stay them from carnage and the pursuit of the enemy, he should be accursed. found therein. The priest having reported that there was no response from God, "Nay, but it is not without cause," said Saul, "that God gives no answer to our inquiry, He who ere now forewarned us of all Himself and spoke to us even before we inquired of Him. Nay, it is some secret sin against Him on our part that is the cause of this silence. Aye and I swear by God Himself that verily, be it my own son Jonathan who hath committed this sin, I will slay him and thus propitiate God, even as though it were from a stranger without kinship with me that I was taking vengeance on His behalf." The multitude thereon calling upon him so to do, he forthwith caused them all to stand in one place, and stood himself with his son in another, and sought by the lot to discover the sinner; and the lot indicated Jonathan. Being asked by his father wherein he had gone astray and of what wrong or unholy act in all his life he was conscious, "Of nothing, father," said he, "save that yesterday, all ignorant of that imprecation and oath of thine, b while in pursuit of the enemy, I tasted a honeycomb." Saul thereat swore to slay him, respecting his oath more than the tender ties of fatherhood and of nature. Yet Jonathan quailed not before this menace of death, but surrendering himself nobly and magnanimously, "Neither will I," said he, "entreat thee to spare me, father. piety's sake and after brilliant victory; for highest consolation were it to leave Hebrews triumphant over Philistines." a Thereupon all the people were moved to grief and sympathy and they swore that they would not suffer Jonathan, the author of that victory, to die. Thus then did they snatch him from his father's curse, and themselves offered prayers b for the young man to God, that He would grant him absolution from his sin.

Arnold, Ephod The rabbinic commentaries on this passage explain that the ephod with the Urim and Thummin was in the ark.

(6) So Saul returned to his own city after destroy-Saul's ing some sixty thousand of the enemy. He then 1 Sam. xiv. reigned happily and, having made war on the neigh-46. bouring nations, subdued those of the Ammanites and Moabites, besides Philistines, Idumaeans and Amalekites, and the king of Soba. He had three sons, Jonathan, Jesus and Melchis, and his daughters were Merobe e and Michael. For commander of his army he had Abēnar, his uncle's son; that uncle was named Ner, and Ner and Kis, the father of Saul, were brothers, sons of Abelios. Saul had, moreover, abundance of chariots and horsemen, and with whomsoever he fought he returned victorious; and he brought the Hebrews to greatness of success and prosperity and rendered them more powerful than the other nations, and of the young men such as excelled in stature and beauty he took for his bodyguards.

XV. 1. give ear to Him, for, while he had dominion over the nations, God had dominion both over him and over the universe. He thereupon announced that God had spoken thus: "Forasmuch as the Amalekites did much evil to the Hebrews in the wilderness, when they were come out of Egypt and on their way to the land that now is theirs. I command thee to take vengeance on the Amalekites in war and, when victorious, to leave not one of them remaining; but you shall deal death to all of every age, beginning with the women and infants, and in this wise take vengeance for what they did to your forefathers; thou art to spare neither beasts of burden nor any cattle at all for private profit or possession, but to devote all to God and, in compliance with the behests of Moses, a to blot out the name of Amalek."

(2) These injunctions Saul promised to fulfil; and Saul reflecting that obedience to God lay not merely in troops at making this campaign against the Amalekites, but 1 Sam. xv. 4. would be displayed yet more by an alacrity and haste that brooked no delay, he mustered all his forces and, having numbered them at Galgala, b found that the Israelites, apart from the tribe of Judah, were some 400,000 men; that tribe by itself furnished 30,000 combatants.a Having then invaded the country of the Amalekites, b Saul posted numerous pickets and ambuscades around the ravine, with intent not only to molest them in open warfare, but also to fall upon them unexpectedly on the roads and envelop and destroy them; and in fact, on joining battle with them he routed the enemy and, pursuing the fugitives, destroyed them all. That task having, in accordance with God's prediction, been successfully achieved, he attacked the cities of the Amalekites; and when, some by engines of war, others by mining operations and exterior opposing walls, others by hunger and thirst, and yet others by other means, the had carried and stormed them all, he then proceeded to the slaughter of women and infants, deeming naught therein cruel or too savage for human nature to perform, first because they were enemies whom he was treating thus, and then because of the commandment of God, whom it was dangerous to disobey. But he also took prisoner the enemy's king, Agag, Saul whom out of admiration for his beauty and his stature captures he accounted worthy to be saved; herein he was no Agag. longer acting in accordance with the will of God, but giving way to feelings of his own, and yielding inopportunely to compassion where it was not permitted to him without peril. For God so hated the race of the Amalekites that He had ordered him to spare not attack upon the latter. In § 140 he alludes to this scriptural passage in mentioning the Sikimites. Cf. note ad loc.

Scripture does not tell us what ravine (Heb. nahal, "bed of a stream," cf. Arabic wady) is meant; the geographical details are vague throughout this account.

d Details of the invasion and sieges are an amplification. Saul's aesthetic motive for sparing Agag is an invention of Josephus.

even the infants. to whom it is more natural that pity should be shown; but Saul saved their king, the author of all the injuries to the Hebrews, having had more regard for the beauty of his enemy than for memory of what God enjoined. The people too were his partners in sin; for they spared the beasts and the cattle and took for their prey what God had forbidden to be preserved, and carried off all the chattels and riches beside; but whatever was not worth coveting as a possession that did they destroy.

(3) Conquering the whole district extending from Saul's Pelusium in Egypt to the Red Sea, a Saul destroyed conquests, the inhabitants as enemies, saving only the race 1 Sam. xv. of the Sikimites, who had settled in the heart of 6, 7. the country of Madian. To these he had, before the combat, sent messengers admonishing them to withdraw, lest they should share the fate of the Amalekites; for, being kinsmen of Raguel, the father-in-law of Moses, he had, as he said, good reason to spare them.

(4) So Saul, as though he had neglected none God's anger of the injunctions which he had received from the at Saul's transgresprophet when embarking on his campaign against sin. the Amalekites, but had strictly observed them all 10. in having conquered his enemies, returned homeward be due to corruption in Josephus's text. Rappaport makes the interesting suggestion that either Josephus wrote "Silimites," the Greek form of the Targum's name "Shalma'ah " for the Kenites, and that this was corrupted to "Sikimites." or that he connected Shalma'ah with Shechem on the basis of Gen. xxxiii. 18 "Shalem a city of Shechem."

The reference to the kinship with ° Cf. A. v. 127. Moses is paralleled in rabbinic tradition. Scripture ascribes Saul's consideration to the Israelites' memory of services

exultant at his success. But God was ill pleased at his sparing the life of the king of Amalek and at the people's making plunder of the cattle, because these things had not been permitted by Him; for He deemed it an outrage that when they had conquered and defeated the foe through the might which He had given them, He should meet with such contempt and disobedience as they would show to no human king. He therefore told the prophet Samuel that He repented of having elected Saul as king, since he was in no wise executing His commands, but doing according to his own pleasure. On hearing this Samuel was sore troubled, and all night long set himself to entreat God to be reconciled to Saul and not wroth with him. But God would grant no pardon to Saul at the prophet's request, accounting it not just to condone sins at the intercession of another; for nothing more favoured their growth than laxity on the part of the wronged, who in seeking a reputation for mildness and kindness are unwittingly the begetters of crime. When therefore God had refused the prophet's prayer and showed that He repented Himself, a Samuel at break of day repaired to Samuel at Galgala to meet Saul. At sight of him, the king ran prophesies to him and embraced him. "I render thanks," said Saul's doom. that I hear sounds of cattle and beasts of burden in the camp?" The king answered that the people had reserved these for sacrifice, but that the race of the Amalekites had been utterly exterminated in accordance with the divine command, and that not one had been left alive, save only their king, whom he had preserved and brought to Samuel, and concerning whose fate they would, he said, take counsel together. But the prophet answered that the Deity took not delight in sacrifices, but in good and righteous men, namely such as follow His will and His commandments and deem that no act of theirs will have been rightly done save what they do at God's bidding; for contempt of God, he said, is shown not in withholding sacrifice but in appearing to disobey Him. "And from such as submit not nor offer the true worship that alone is acceptable to God, even though they sacrifice many fat victims, even though they present to Him sumptuous offerings wrought of silver and gold, yet does He not receive these gifts graciously, but rejects them and regards them as tokens of iniquity rather than as piety. But they who are mindful of this one thing alone, to wit what God has spoken and commanded, and who choose rather to die than to transgress aught thereof, in them does He rejoice; from them He requires no sacrifice, or, should they offer any, however modest, more gladly does He welcome this homage from poverty than that of the wealthiest. to destruction? Unless it be that thou regardest the sacrificing of them to God as equivalent to destroying them! Expect, therefore, that thou wilt be deprived of thy kingship and of the power upon which thou hast presumed in neglecting the God who gave it thee." Saul admitted that he had done wrong and did not deny his sin; yes, he said, he had transgressed the prophet's commands; yet indeed it was from fear and dread of his soldiers that he had not prevented them from plundering the spoils nor restrained them. "But," said he, "pardon me and be merciful," and promised to beware of offending in future. Then he besought the prophet to return (with him) and sacrifice thank-offerings a to God. But Samuel, seeing that God was not to be reconciled, departed to his home.

(5) Then Saul, seeking to detain Samuel, laid hold Samuel has upon his mantle and, since Samuel was hastening Agag put to to be gone, pulled it so violently that he rent the 1 Sam. xv. garment in twain. Whereat the prophet said that even so had his kingdom been rent from him, and that one would succeed to it who was virtuous and just, for God would abide by what He had decreed concerning him, as change and reversal of judgement were the part of human frailty and not of divine Saul replied that, impious though he had been, he could not undo what had been done; howbeit he besought him at least to do him honour in the eyes of the multitude by coming with him to worship God.^b Samuel granted him this request and went with him and worshipped God. Then too was Josephus infers that Samuel also worshipped. Scripture says that Samuel returned with Saul and "Saul worshipped the Lord.

As Samuel, however, 1 Sam. xv. vet grieved for him, God bade him banish his care and, taking the holy oil, to repair to the city of Bethlehem to Jesse son of Obed, and to anoint from among his sons him whom He Himself should point out as the future king. Samuel replied that he was fearful lest Saul on learning of this should slav him by ambush or even openly; but, God having advised him e and provided him a way of safety, he came to the city aforesaid. Here all greeted him and questioned him concerning the cause of his coming, and he said that he was come to sacrifice to God. Having then performed the sacrifice, he called Jesse with his children to the sacred feast, and when

But he mistook God's design; for, when he asked Him whether he should anoint with the oil this young man whom he himself had admired and accounted worthy of the kingship, He replied that men and God see not the same things. thou, looking upon this young man's beauty, thinkest none other than him worthy to be king; but I make not of the kingdom a prize for comeliness of body, but for virtue of soul, and I seek one who in full measure is distinguished by this, one adorned with piety, justice, fortitude and obedience, qualities whereof beauty of soul consists." When God had thus spoken, Samuel bade Jesse bring all his sons before him, and he caused five c others to appear. The eldest was called Eliab, the second Aminadab,d the third Samal, the fourth Nathanael, the fifth Rael, and the sixth Asam. The prophet, seeing these to be in no way inferior to the eldest in appearance, asked God which among them He chose for king. When God answered, "None," he inquired of Jesse whether he had yet other children. He said that he had one named David, but that he was a

Now so soon as David appeared at his father's summons,—a lad of ruddy colour, with piercing a eyes and in other ways handsome,—"This," said Samuel Samuel softly to himself, "is he whom it has pleased God David. to make king"; and he sat himself down and made 1 Sam. xvi. the youth sit beside him, and then Jesse with his other sons. Then, in the sight of David, he took the oil and anointed him and spoke low into his ear, explaining that God had chosen him to be king. He also exhorted c him to be righteous and obedient to His commandments, for so would the kingship long continue to be his, and his house would become splendid and renowned; he would subdue the Philistines and, victorious and triumphant over all nations with whom he might wage war, he would in his lifetime attain glorious fame and bequeath it to his posterity.

ever the evil spirits should assail and torment Saul, to have him stand over the king and strike the strings and chant his songs. Saul did not neglect this advice, but ordered search to be made for such a man. And when one of those present said that he had seen in the city of Bethlehem a son of Jesse, a mere boy in years, but of pleasing and fair appearance and in other ways worthy of regard, who was, moreover, skilled in playing on the harp and in the singing of songs, and an excellent soldier, Saul sent to Jesse and ordered him to take David from the flocks and send him to him; he wished, he said, to see the young man, having heard of his comeliness and valour. Jesse sent his son, also giving him presents to carry to Saul. When he came, Saul was delighted with him, made him his armour-bearer and held him in the highest honour, for his illness was charmed away by him; and against that trouble caused by the evil spirits, whensoever they assailed him, he had no other physician than David, who, by singing his songs and playing upon the harp, restored Saul to himself. He accordingly sent to Jesse, the lad's father, desiring him to leave David with him, since the sight of the boy and his presence gave him pleasure. Jesse would not gainsay Saul, but permitted him to keep David.

camp there. Saul, on his side, led out his army against them, and, having pitched his camp on a certain mountain, forced the Philistines to abandon their first camp a and to take up a similar position on another mountain over against that which he had occupied himself. The two camps were separated by a valley between the hills on which they lay. And now there came down from the camp of the Philistines one by name Goliath, of the city of Gitta, a man of gigantic stature. For he measured four b cubits and a span, and was clad in armour proportioned to his frame. He wore a breastplate weighing 5000 shekels, with a helmet and greaves of bronze such as were meet to protect the limbs of a man of such prodigious size. His spear was not light enough to be borne in the right hand, but he carried it elevated on his shoulders; he had also a spear weighing 600 shekels,c and many followed him, carrying his armour.d Standing, then, between the opposing forces, this Goliath gave a mighty shout and said to Saul and the Hebrews, "I hereby deliver you from battle and its perils. For what need is there for your troops to join arms and to suffer heavy losses? Give me one of your men to fight with me, and the issue of the war shall be decided by the single victor, and to father. Out of respect for his brother David withdrew, but gave out to some of the soldiers that he wished to fight with the challenger. As they straightway reported the lad's resolve to Saul, the king sent for him; and David, when asked by him what he wished, said, "Let not thy spirit be downcast nor fearful, O King, for I will bring down the presumption of the foe by joining battle with him and throwing this mighty a giant down before me. (4) So then Saul, praying that the lad's zeal and David goes hardihood might be rewarded by God with a like forth to success, said, "Go forth to battle." And he clad Goliath. 1 Sam, xvii. him in his own breastplate, girt his sword about him, 37. fitted a helmet upon his head and so sent him out. But David was weighed down by this armour, for he had not been trained nor taught to wear armour, and said, "Let this fine apparel be for thee, O King, for thou indeed art able to wear it, but suffer me, as thy servant, to fight just as I will." Accordingly he laid down the armour and, taking up his staff, he put five stones from the brook into his shepherd's wallet, and with a sling in his right hand advanced against Goliath. The enemy, seeing him approaching in this manner, showed his scorn, and derided him for coming to fight, not with such weapons as men are accustomed to use against other men, but with those wherewith we drive away and keep off dogs. he perhaps take him for a dog, and not a man? "No," replied David, "not even for a dog, but something still worse." This roused Goliath's anger, and he called down curses upon him in his god's name and threatened to give his flesh to the beasts of earth and the birds of heaven to rend asunder. But David answered him, "Thou comest against me with sword, spear and breastplate, but I, in coming against thee, have God for my armour, who will destroy both thee and all your host by our hands. For I will this day

Then, running forward, David stood over his prostrate foe and with the other's broadsword, having no sword of his own, he cut off his head. Goliath's fall caused the defeat and rout of the Philistines; for, seeing their best warrior laid low and fearing a complete disaster, they resolved to remain no longer, but sought to save themselves from danger by ignominious and disorderly flight. For they, coming David's to meet the victorious army with cymbals, timbrels triumph. and every sign of rejoicing, sang, the elder women xviii 6. how Saul had slain many thousands of the Philistines, but the maidens how David had destroyed tens of thousands. The king on hearing this, and how he was given the lesser portion of the credit, while the larger number, the myriads, was ascribed to the youth, thought within himself that after so splendid an acclamation nothing more was lacking to David save the kingship, and now began to fear him and to regard him with suspicion. So he removed him from his former station-for he had made him his armour-bearer—since in his alarm he thought this far too close to his person, and appointed him captain of a thousand, thus giving him a better post, but one, as he thought, safer for himself.g For

(xi. 1) However Saul was not for long to acquiesce Jonathan in this state of things; for, seeing David in favour of Saul's both with God and with the multitude, he took alarm plot; David and, being unable to conceal his fears—concerning, 1Sam.xix.1. as they did, such great interests as his kingdom and his life, the loss of either of which would be a dreadful calamity-he resolved to slav David and charged Jonathan his son and the most trusted of his men to make away with him. Jonathan was amazed at this change in his father's feelings toward David from great benevolence to not merely moderate dislike but to the compassing of his death; and, loving the lad and reverencing him for his virtue, he told him of his father's secret plan and intent. He counselled him, moreover, to take heed to himself and to keep out of sight on the morrow, saying that he would himself go to greet his father and, when the opportunity presented itself, would converse with him about David. and discover the reason (of his dislike); he would then make light of this, representing that he ought not on such ground to put to death one who had rendered so many services to the people and proved a benefactor to Saul himself, on account of which he might well have secured pardon for even the gravest crimes. "And I will inform thee," he added, "what is my father's mind." David, in compliance with this excellent counsel, withdrew himself from the king's sight.

ing him cheerful and gay, a began to address him Jonathan concerning David. "What wrongdoing small or persuades Saul to take great, father, canst thou have found in him that thou David back. hast ordered us to put to death one who has done so much in aiding thine own welfare and yet more in punishing the Philistines, and so has delivered the Hebrew people from the contumely and derision which for forty days they had endured when no one else dared face the enemy's challenge, and who thereafter brought thee the appointed number of enemy heads and received as his recompense my sister in marriage? Thus his death would be grievous to us, not only by reason of his merits, but also of the ties of kinship; for thy daughter will likewise be wronged by his death, destined to experience widowhood before even entering on the joy of wedded life. Let these reflections move thee to greater mildness; do no injury to one who first rendered us that great service of restoring thee to health, when he drove out the evil spirit and the demons that beset thee and brought peace from them to thy soul, and then avenged us upon our enemies. Shameful would it be to forget these things." b By these words Saul was won over and he swore to his son that he would do David no wrong; so does a just cause prevail over anger and fear. Jonathan then sent for David and not only informed him of the kindly and reassuring attitude

Saul, however, did not give him the 18am. xix. reception which he expected after that achievement. but was aggrieved by his success, believing that David had become more dangerous to him by reason of his exploits. And when the evil spirit again came upon him to trouble and confuse him, he called David to the chamber wherein he lay, and, holding his spear in his hand, bade him charm away the spell with his harp and songs. Then, when David did as he had been commanded, Saul hurled his spear at him with all his might. David, seeing it coming, got out of its way; then he fled to his own house and remained there all that day.

And she let him down through a window and got him safely away. Next she made up the bed as for a sick person and put a goat's liver a beneath the covers; and when at daybreak her father sent to fetch David, she told those who came for him that he had been attacked by illness during the night, and she showed them the bed all covered up, and by the quivering of the liver which shook the bedclothes convinced them that what lay there was David gasping for breath. b When the messengers reported to Saul that David had fallen ill during the night, he ordered him to be brought just as he was, for he wished to kill him. And when they came and uncovered the bed, they discovered the woman's trick, which they reported to the king. But when her father rebuked her for Michal having saved his enemy and tricked himself, she excuses her conduct to resorted to a plausible defence; her husband, she Saul. declared, had threatened to kill her and so, by terrify- 17. ing her, had secured her aid in his escape, for which she deserved pardon, seeing that she had acted under constraint and not of her own free will. The context shows that it must have been something round and hairy to give the appearance of a human head, and so it was understood by the rabbis. The details of Michal's stratagem are invented by Josephus.

So Saul pardoned the girl. Meanwhile David, having David finds escaped from danger, repaired to the prophet Samuel Samuel at at Armatha, and recounted to him the king's plot Ramah against him, and how he had wellnigh been struck i Sam. xix. by his spear and killed, though he had never dealt ill 18. with him nor been cowardly in combating his foes, but had ever with God's aid been indeed fortunate. Now that was the reason for Saul's hatred of David.

But they, on coming to Samuel and finding there an assembly of prophets, were themselves possessed by the spirit of God and began to prophesy. Saul, hearing thereof, sent others after David, and when these met with the same experience as the first, he dispatched yet more; but this third company prophesied likewise, and finally in a rage he set out himself. But so soon as he came near them, Samuel, even before seeing him, caused him too to prophesy.b On reaching him, Saul, losing his reason under the impulse of that mighty spirit, stripped off his clothes and lay prostrate on the ground for a whole day and night in the sight

Jonathan entreated him to put no 1 Sam. xx. 1. faith either in his own suspicions or in slanderers, if indeed there were any such, but to pay heed to him and take courage; for, he said, his father was meditating nothing of the sort, else he would have told him of it and taken him into his counsel, since in all else he acted in concert with him. But David swore a that it was truly so, and he asked Jonathan to believe him and look out for his safety instead of contemptuously questioning the truth of his words and waiting to recognize their truth until he should actually behold or learn of his assassination. His father, he declared, had told him nothing of all this because he knew of his son's friendship and affection for himself.

and, should death befall me, preserve my children's lives and make over to them the recompense that is due me for my present services." After he had taken these oaths, he dismissed David, telling him to go to a certain place in the plain where he (Jonathan) was wont to exercise himself a; there, he said, when he had learnt his father's mind, he would rejoin him, accompanied only by a lad. "And if, after throwing three darts b at the mark, I order the lad to bring them to me, for they will be found lying in front of it, know that no mischief is to be feared from my father; but if thou hearest me say the contrary, then look thou also for the contrary from the king. past day and on this, the son of Jesse had been absent from the festive meal. Jonathan replied, as had been agreed, that he had gone to his native place where his tribe was keeping festival, and with his (Jonathan's) permission. "What is more," he added, he even invited me to attend that sacrifice, and, if leave be given me, I shall go; for thou knowest the affection that I bear to him." a Then did Jonathan discover all his father's malevolence toward David and plainly perceive his whole intent. For Saul attacks Saul did not restrain his wrath, but with curses David's denounced him as the offspring of renegades and accomplice. I Sam. xx. an enemy, and accused him of being in league with 30. David and his accomplice, and as having respect neither for himself nor for his mother in taking that attitude and in refusing to believe that, so long as David lived, their hold upon the kingdom was insecure. "Now then, send for him," said he, "that he may be punished." "But," Jonathan objected, "for what crime wouldst thou punish him?" Whereupon the wrath of Saul found vent no more in words and abuse, but, seizing his spear, he leapt toward him with intent to slay him. And although his friends prevented him b from perpetrating the deed, he had now made plain to his son how he hated David and craved to make away with him, seeing that on his account he had wellnigh become the slayer even of his own son.

(10) The king's son instantly rushed from the feast Jonathan and, prevented by grief from tasting a morsel, passed secretly the night in tears at the thought that he himself had in the fields narrowly escaped death and that David was doomed well.

 David's invitation to Jonathan is unscriptural. b Unscriptural detail.

plotter against my realm? And why, pray, didst thou deliver oracles concerning the future? For assuredly thou wert not ignorant that he was fleeing from me and that he hated my house." The high priest did not resort to a denial of what had taken place, but frankly confessed that he had rendered those services, yet not to gratify David, but Saul. "I knew him not," said he, "for thine enemy, but as one of thy most faithful servants and thy captain, and, what is more, as thy son-in-law now and kinsman. Men bestow such dignities not on their enemies, but on those who show them the greatest goodwill and esteem. Nor was this the first time that I prophesied for him; often have I done so on other occasions as well. when he told me that he had been sent by thee in great haste on a certain matter, had I refused any of his desires. I should have thought this to be gainsaying thee rather than him. Therefore, think not ill of me, nor, from what thou now hearest of David's designs, regard with suspicion what I then deemed an act of humanity; for it was to thy friend and to thy son-in-law and captain that I rendered it, not to thine enemy."

stage masks, they assume in their place audacity, recklessness, contempt for things human and divine; and at the moment when they most need piety and righteousness, being now within closest reach of envy, with all their thoughts and acts exposed to all men, then, as though God no longer saw them or were overawed by their power, they break out into these riotous acts. Their fear of rumours, their wilful hates,a their irrational loves-these they regard as valid, sure and true, acceptable to man and God, but of the future they take not the least account. They first honour those who have toiled in their service, and then envy them the honours which they have conferred; and, after promoting men to high distinction, they deprive them not only of this, but, on its very account, of life itself, on malicious charges which their extravagance renders incredible. Their punishments are inflicted not for acts deserving of chastisement, but on the faith of calumnies and unsifted accusations, nor do they fall on those who ought so to suffer, but on whomsoever they can put to death. Of this we have a signal example in the conduct of Saul, son of Kis, the first to become king of the Hebrews after the period of aristocracy and the government under the judges, for he slew three hundred priests and prophets from suspicion of Abimelech, and further demolished their city and strove to leave what was virtually their temple b destitute of priests and prophets, by first slaying so many of them and then not suffering even their native place to remain, that others might come after them.

(8) Now Abiathar, the son of Abimelech, who alone Abiathar, of the family of priests slaughtered by Saul had been the high priests son, able to escape, fled to David and told him of the flees to tragedy of his kin and the slaying of his father. David 1 Sam. xxii. replied that he had known that this fate would befall 20. them, when he saw Doeg; he had, he said, suspected that the high priest would be denounced to the king by this man, and he blamed himself as the cause of this misfortune to them. Howbeit he besought Abiathar to abide there and to live with him, since nowhere else would he be so safely hidden.

(xiii. 1) At this same time David, hearing that the David saves Philistines had invaded the country of the Killanians a Keilah from and were ravaging it, offered to take the field against the Philthem, after inquiring of God through the prophet b 1 Sam. xxiii whether He would grant him victory. And when I the prophet reported that God had so signified, he threw himself upon the Philistines with his companions, made a great slaughter of them and carried off their spoils. As he then remained with the Killanians until they had secured their threshing-floors and safely got in their crops, ohis presence there was reported to King Saul. For this exploit and its success did not remain confined to those who had witnessed them, but the fame of it was carried abroad to the ears of all, the king's included, with praise of the deed and the doer of it. Saul rejoiced to hear but in 1 Sam. xxiii. 9 we read that David consulted God about leaving Keilah, through the priest Abimelech by means of the ephod-a detail omitted in Josephus's account below, § 274.

The safeguarding of the crops is an amplification of Scripture.

The king commended them and expressed his thanks for their having given him information of his enemy, and promised that their loyalty should not long await its reward b; he then sent a party to search for David and to scour the desert, assuring them that he would himself follow. Thus they spurred the king on to the pursuit and capture of David, because they were anxious not merely to denounce his enemy to him, but to give more palpable proof of their loyalty to him by actually delivering David into his hands. They failed, however, in their iniquitous and base desire, which was the more so in that they would have incurred no risk by not informing Saul of these things; yet, from obsequiousness and in the expectation of receiving gain from the king, they calumniated and promised to deliver up a God-favoured man whose death was being unjustly sought, and who might have remained concealed.º For David, learning of the evil designs of the Ziphites and the king's approach, quitted the

The man who saw him said to David that here was his God-sent opportunity for vengeance on his enemy and counselled him to cut off Saul's head a and so deliver himself from his long wandering and misery. whereupon David arose and only pulled off some of the woollen nap b of the mantle that Saul was wearing; but, repenting forthwith, said, "It is not right to murder one's own master or one whom God has accounted worthy of kingship. And even though he treats me ill, vet I must not do the like to him." Then, when Saul had left the cave, David came forth and cried aloud, beseeching Saul to hear him. His virtue and the affection of the multi- 1 Sam. tude for him were manifested by the prolonged xxv. 1. mourning which the people made, and by the display and zeal given to his burial and to the observance of the customary rites. For they buried him in his native Armatha and wept for him very many days, with no mere public mourning as for the death of a stranger, but each privately grieving as for his own. He was a man of just and kindly nature and for that reason very dear to God. He was ruler and leader of the people after the death of the high priest Eli, for twelve years alone, and together with King Saul for eighteen more. Such then was the end of Samuel.

(6) Now there was a certain Ziphite of the city of The wealthy Emman, who was wealthy and had much cattle; churlishly indeed he maintained a flock of three thousand sheep refuses and a thousand goats. b The details of the burial and mourning are additions to Scripture.

No figures are given in Scripture; the common rabbinic tradition fixes Samuel's term as prophet at 12 years, another, also found in Julius Africanus, makes it 40 years. Ginzberg plausibly suggests that the latter figure was reached by combining Josephus's statement that Samuel began to prophesy at 12 years, A. v. 348, with the rabbinic tradition that Samuel was 52 years old when he died.

but should hold it more important than all these things to wrong no man and should reckon it a crime and an offence against God to touch what belonged to another. These instructions he gave to his men in the belief that he was obliging a good man and one worthy of such consideration.^a But Nabal—such was his name—was a hard man and of bad character, who lived according to the practices of the cynics. He had, however, been blessed with a wife who was virtuous, discreet and good to look upon. At the time, then, when this Nabal was shearing his sheep, David sent ten of his men by whom he greeted him and joined him in praying that he might be so employed for many years to come. He then besought him to grant him somewhat from his abundant means; he would have learnt from his shepherds that David and his men had done them no wrong, but had been the guardians of their persons and of their flocks throughout their long sojourn in the wilderness, nor would he ever repent of having given anything to David. The messengers acquitted themselves of this mission to Nabal, but he gave them a very uncivil and harsh reception. He first asked them who this David was, and, on being told that he was the son of Jesse, said, "So then nowadays fugitives think much of themselves and boast about deserting their masters." These words being reported to David aroused his indignation, and bidding four hundred of his men to follow him in arms and leaving two hundred to guard the baggage—for he had by now six hundred men he marched against Nabal, having sworn utterly to

Such action, he added, would result in mischief for his master and for herself. At the servant's story, Abigaia c-such was her name—saddled her asses, loaded them with all manner of presents a and, without a word to her husband, who was insensible from drink, e set off to find David. And as she was descending the defiles of the mountain, she was met by David coming against Nabal with his four hundred men. At sight of him the woman leapt to the ground, and falling on her face bowed down before him: she entreated him not to mind the words of Nabal, for he could not be ignorant that the man was like his name (Nabal in the Hebrew tongue signifies "folly"), while for herself she pleaded that she had not seen David's messengers. from soiling thy hands with human blood. For if thou remainest clean, He Himself will avenge thee on the wicked; and may the evil that awaits Nabal fall likewise on the heads of thy foes. But be gracious to me in deigning to receive these presents from me, and, out of regard for me, dismiss thy indignation and wrath against my husband and against his house. For it becomes thee to show mildness and humanity, especially as thou art destined to be king." And David accepted the presents and said, "In truth, lady, it was gracious God who led thee to us this day; else thou wouldst not have seen the coming day, for I had sworn to destroy the house of Nabal this very night and to leave not one of you, belonging as you do to a man who has been so mean and ungrateful to me and to my comrades. When the commander heard this and asked who was calling him, David replied, "I, son of Jesse, the fugitive from you. But how comes it that one so great as thou, holding the first rank in the king's service, art so negligent in guarding the person of thy master, and that sleep is more to thy liking than his safety and protection? This conduct indeed merits the punishment of death, for a little while since some men penetrated right through your camp to the king's person and to all the others, and you did not even perceive it. Look now for the king's spear and his flask of water and thou wilt learn what mischief has befallen in your midst without your knowing of it." Then Saul, when he recognized the Saul is again voice of David and learned that though he had had reconciled to David. him at his mercy, being asleep and neglected by his 1 Sam. xxvi. guards, he had yet not slain him but spared the life which he might justly have taken, gave him thanks for his preservation and exhorted him to be of good courage and, without fear of suffering further injury from himself, to return to his home. For, he said, he was now persuaded that he did not love his own self so well as he was loved by David, seeing that he had pursued this man who might have been his safeguard and who had given many proofs of his loyalty, and that he had forced him to live so long in exile, in terror of his life, bereft of friends and of kindred, while he himself had been repeatedly spared by him mayed at sight of the hostile force which was very large and, as he surmised, superior to his own; and he asked through the prophets for an oracle from God concerning the battle and its issue. But, as no response came from God. Saul was yet more afraid and his heart failed him, foreseeing inevitable disaster since the Deity was no longer at his side. However, he gave orders to search out for him a woman among the ventriloguists and those who call up the spirits of the dead, that so he might learn how matters would turn out for him. For this sort of ventriloquist raises up the spirits of the dead and through them foretells the future to those who inquire of them. Being informed by one of his servants that there was such a woman in the city of Dor, a Saul, without the knowledge of any in the camp, stripped off his royal robes and, accompanied by two servants whom he knew to be quite trustworthy, came to Dor to this woman and besought her to bring up for him by divination the soul of whomever he should name. The woman, however, objected, saying that she would not defy the king, who had expelled that class of diviners; nor was it fair on his part, who had suffered no wrong from her, to lay this snare to catch her in forbidden acts and cause her to be punished. Thereupon Saul swore that none should know of it, that he would tell no one else of her divination and that she should be in no danger. Having by these oaths persuaded her to forget her fears, he bade her bring up for him the soul of Samuel. The woman, ignorant who Samuel The witch was, summoned him from Hades. And when he spirit of Samuel revealed who he was.^a When Saul indicated that it was so and asked whence came her alarm, she replied that she saw someone arise in form like God. Saul then bade her describe the appearance, the dress and the age of the man she saw, and she represented him as of advanced age, of distinguished aspect and clad in a priestly mantle. b By these tokens the king recognized him to be Samuel and, falling to the ground, saluted him and made obeisance. Being asked by the shade of Samuel wherefore he had disturbed him and caused him to be brought up. Saul bewailed his necessity; the enemy, he said, was pressing heavily upon him and he was helpless in his present plight, being abandoned by God and failing to obtain an oracle whether through prophets or through dreams. "That is why I have betaken myself to thee, for thou wilt provide for me." But Samuel, seeing that Saul was now approaching a final change of fortune, c said, "It is idle to seek to learn any more from me, since God has abandoned thee. But this much thou mayest hear, that David is destined to be king and to achieve success in this war, while thou must lose both thy sovereignty and thy

And this she did, not in return for any benefit received, nor in quest of any favour to come-for she knew that he was about to die-, whereas men are by nature wont either to emulate those who have bestowed some kindness upon them or to be beforehand in flattering those from whom they may possibly receive some benefit. It is well, then, to take this woman for an example and show kindness to all who are in need, and to regard nothing as nobler than this or more befitting the human race or more likely to make God gracious and ready to bestow upon us His blessings. Concerning this woman, then, let these words suffice. But now I shall touch on a subject Reflections profitable to states, peoples and nations, and of on the heroism of interest to all good men-one whereby all should be induced to pursue virtue and to aspire to those things which may procure them glory and eternal renown, one, moreover, that should instil into the hearts of kings of nations and rulers of cities a great desire and zeal for noble deeds, should stimulate them to face dangers and death for their country's sake, and teach them to despise all terrors. The occasion for this discourse I find in the person of Saul, king of the Hebrews. For he, although he knew of what was to come and his impending death, which the prophet had foretold, vet determined not to flee from it or. by clinging to life, to betray his people to the enemy and dishonour the dignity of kingship; instead, he thought it noble to expose himself, his house and his children to these perils and, along with them, to fall fighting for his subjects.^a He preferred to have his sons meet death as brave men rather than leave them behind, while still uncertain what kind of men they might prove to be; for thus, as successors and posterity, he would obtain glory and an ageless name.b Such a man alone, in my opinion, is just, valiant and wise, and he, if any has been or shall be such, deserves to have all men acknowledge his virtue. For men who have gone forth to war with high hopes, thinking to conquer and return in safety, and have accomplished some brilliant feat are, to my mind, mistakenly de-

a The rabbis also emphasize Saul's heroism in exposing himself and his sons to danger in battle.

b That is, glory etc. would take the place of physical posterity. The last phrase is perhaps a conscious echo of αγήρων ἔπαινον in Pericles' funeral oration, Thucydides ii. 43.

scribed as valiant by the historians and other writers who have spoken of such persons. Certainly it is just that these too receive approbation; but the terms "stout-hearted," "greatly daring," "contemptuous of danger" can justly be applied only to such as have emulated Saul. That men, not knowing what is to happen to them in war, should not flinch from it, but should commit themselves to an uncertain future and ride the stormy seas of chance—all this still falls short of magnanimity, a however many the exploits they may accomplish. On the other hand, to harbour in one's heart no hope of success, but to know beforehand that one must die and die fighting, and then not to fear nor be appalled at this terrible fate, but to meet it with full knowledge of what is coming-that, in my judgement, is proof of true valour. And this Saul did, thereby showing that it behoves all men who aspire to fame after death so to act as to leave such a name after them; especially should kings do so, since the greatness of their power forbids them not merely to be bad to their subjects. but even to be less than wholly good. I might say still more than this about Saul and his courage, for they are subjects which afford us ample material; but, lest we should appear to lack good taste in delivering this panegyric, I will return again to the point from which I made this digression.

appeared King Anchus with his own troops, followed to dismiss David from by David with his six hundred soldiers. On seeing his army, him, the Philistine generals asked the king whence 1 sam. these Hebrews a had come and who had summoned them. The king replied that this was David who had fled from Saul, his master, and had come to him; he had received him, and now David, wishing to repay that favour and to be avenged on Saul, was fighting in their ranks. The generals, however, reproached him for having taken as an ally one that was their enemy, and they advised him to dismiss him lest on David's account he should unwittingly do grave mischief to his friends; for he would be affording David an opportunity of becoming reconciled to his master by injuring their army. Accordingly they bade him with this in mind to send David with his six hundred soldiers back to the place which he had given him for his habitation; for this was that same David of whom the virgins sang that he had slain many myriads of the Philistines. Having listened to these words and considering them well spoken, the king of Gitta called David and said, "For myself, I can testify to the great zeal and friendliness which thou hast shown to me, and it was for that reason that I brought thee as an ally; but such is not the view of our chiefs. Now then, go within a day's time to the place which I have given thee, and suspect nothing untoward. There keep guard for me over the country, lest any of the enemy invade it. That too a straggler, an Egyptian by race, who was exhausted from want and hunger, having endured three days' wandering in the wilderness without food. After he had first revived him and restored him with food and drink, David asked him who he was a and whence he came. He revealed that he was of Egyptian race and had been left behind by his master, being unable to follow because of sickness; he further made known that he was one of those who had burnt and ravaged Sekella as well as parts of Judaea. So David made David's men use of the man to guide him to the Amalekites, and surprise the came upon them lying around on the ground, some and massacre at their morning meal, others already drunken and them. relaxed with wine, regaling themselves with their 15. spoils and booty. Falling suddenly upon them, he made a great slaughter of them, for, being unarmed and expecting no such thing but intent upon drinking and revelry, they were all an easy prey. Some, being surprised at the outspread tables, were massacred beside them, and their streaming blood swept victuals and food away; others were drinking each other's health when he slew them; still others, under the influence of strong drink, were plunged in sleep; while those who had been quick enough to put on their armour and make a stand against him-these too he cut to pieces with no less ease than those who lay defenceless on the ground.b David's companions too continued the slaughter from the first hour until evening, so that there were left of the Amalekites no more than four hundred; these, by mounting swift camels, had escaped. So David recovered not only the booty which the enemy had carried off, but also his wives and those of his companions. When, on their return, they arrived at the A dispute spot where they had left in charge of the baggage is equitably two hundred men who were unable to follow, the decided by David. other four hundred were unwilling to share with them 1 Sam. xxx. in their gains and booty, saying that, as they had not 21. gone along but had been unequal to the pursuit, they ought to be content with getting back their wives who had been rescued. But David pronounced this view of theirs wicked and unjust; for, he said, seeing that God had enabled them to avenge themselves on their enemies and to recover all their possessions, they were bound to give an equal share of their gains to all who had taken part in the expedition, especially as they had remained to guard the baggage. thenceforward this law has prevailed among them, that those who guard the baggage receive the same share as those who do the fighting. Moreover, on his return to Sekella, David sent around portions of the spoils to all his acquaintances and friends in the tribe of Judah. Such, then, was the affair of the sacking of Sekella and the slaughter of the Amalekites.

of Saul and his sons, they were horrified at the thought of leaving them unburied, and so the most valiant and hardy among them-and this city breeds men stalwart of body and soul-set forth and, having marched all night, reached Bethsan. Then, having advanced to the enemy's ramparts and taken down the bodies of Saul and his sons, they bore them to Jabēsa, and the enemy was neither able nor dared to hinder them, because of their prowess.a The Jabesēnians with public mourning b buried the bodies in the fairest spot in their country, called Arourac ("Plowland"), and, with their wives and children, continued for seven days to mourn for them, beating the breast and bewailing the king and his sons, without touching either meat or drink.

Or (with Lat.) "two," i.e. 20 years in all, instead of 40. This would agree with A. x. 143 and with later Jewish tradition (Sepher Yuhasin) citing this passage. No figures are given in Scripture, but ef. the LXX addition to 1 Sam. xiii. I stating that Saul reigned 2 years (Luc. 30 years). On the other hand the tradition in Acts xiii. 21 gives 40 years. Rappaport suggests that a Christian scribe has changed the text of Josephus here to "twenty-two" to make it conform to the New Testament, and that the author of Sepher Yuhasin is indirectly combating this view.

(i. 1) Now this battle, as it happened, took place David on the same day on which David returned to Sikella learns of Saul's death after his victory over the Amalekites.a And when from the he had already been two days in Sikella, there came, 2 Sam. i. 1. on the third day, the slaver of Saul, who had escaped from the battle with the Philistines, with his clothes rent and ashes b sprinkled on his head. He prostrated himself before David and, to his question whence he had come in such condition, replied, "From the battle of the Israelites." He then went on to tell that its issue had been disastrous to the Hebrews, for many tens of thousands of them had been slain and Saul, their king, had also fallen along with his sons. These things he claimed to report as one who had himself been present at the rout of the Hebrews and had been with the king when he fled, and he further confessed to having killed Saul at his own request when he was about to be taken by the enemy; for, after he had fallen upon his sword, he had been too weak, because of the great number of his wounds, to do away with himself.c As token of Saul's having been slain, he showed the gold ornament that had been on the king's arm and his crown, which he had

And such nobility did David show and such loyalty to Saul that not only was he grieved at his death, although he had several times been in danger of losing his own life at his hands, but he also punished the man who had killed him; he told him that he had accused himself of having slain the king, and when he learned that his father was of the Amalekite race, he ordered him to be put to death. upon him at a certain spring in the city of Gabaon,a drew up his men for battle. Abenner then said to him that he wished to discover which of them had the braver soldiers, and it was agreed that twelve men from either side should meet in combat. Accordingly there advanced to the space between the opposing lines the men who had been chosen by either of the commanders. They threw their spears b and then drew their swords and each, taking hold of his opponent's head and holding him fast, pierced the other's ribs and flanks with his sword until all were killed as though by agreement. And when these Defeat and had fallen, the rest of the army also went into abner. action and, after a stubborn fight, Abenner's men 2 Sam. ii. 17. were defeated. Once they were routed, Joab did not relax the pursuit, but himself pressed after them and gave orders to his soldiers to follow at their heels and not weary in dealing death. His brothers also fought with eagerness, and most conspicuous among them was the youngest, Asaēl, who was famous for his fleetness of foot, for not only could he beat men, but he was said to have outrun a horse with which he had been matched in a race. c So he pursued Abenner with a rush, dashing straight ahead, and turning neither to the one side nor to the other. Abenner, however, turned around and attempted to talk him out of his fixed intent, first telling him to stop pursuing and take the armour of one of his own soldiers for c. 5 m. himself, and then, as he could not persuade him to do this, urging him to restrain himself and give up the pursuit, lest he should kill him and so end his friendly relations with his brother (Joab). But as Asaēl paid Abner slays no attention to these words and continued in pursuit, brother Abenner, while still in flight, with a well-aimed Asahel. blow of his spear hurled backwards, a struck him dead 2 Sam. ii. 23. on the spot. When the men who were pursuing Abenner with Asaël came to the place where he lay, they surrounded his dead body and gave up their pursuit of the enemy. But Joab himself and his brother Abisai ran past the corpse and, finding cause for pressing still harder after Abenner in their wrath at the death of Asaēl, with incredible speed and determination pursued Abenner up to a certain place called Ammata b it being now about sunset. Climbing a certain hill in that place, Joab caught sight of Abenner and the men of the tribe of Benjamin who were with him.c Abenner then cried out and said that it was not right to stir up fellow-countrymen to strife and warfare, and furthermore that Joab's brother Asaēl had been in the wrong in not listening to him when he had urged him to give up the pursuit, for which reason he had been struck and killed. Accepting his view and considering these words as Joah makes an expression of sympathy, Joab gave a signal on the peace with trumpet and recalled his men, so putting a stop to 2 Sam. ii. 27.

The text is probably corrupt. Scripture says that the Benjamites were gathered together with Abner on a hill. Perhaps the variant μέγας in Josephus conceals the name Γαί (bibl. Giah), mentioned in the verse quoted in the preceding note. I suspect that the text originally read somewhat as follows: "Climbing a certain hill in Gai (in the territory) of the tribe of Benjamin, Joab caught sight of them (i.e. the Benjamites) and Abner."

of Abitale, a he called Saphatias b; and the sixth, by Aigla, he named Jethroas. Now when civil war broke out and the followers of each of the two kings had frequent encounters and fights, Abenner, the commander-in-chief of Saul's son, being a clever man and enjoying very great favour with the populace, contrived to keep them on the side of Jebosthos, and for a considerable time they supported him. Later, Abner however, when Abenner was made the object of com- transfers allegiance plaints and accused of intimacy with Saul's concubine, from Ishnamed Respha, the daughter of Sibatos, and was David. censured by Jebosthos, he was very much hurt and 2 Sam. iii. 7 angered at receiving what he thought was unjust treatment from him in spite of all the kindness he had shown Jebosthos. He therefore threatened to transfer the kingship to David and to show that it was not through his own strength and understanding that Jebosthos ruled over the people across the Jordan, but through his generalship and loyalty. Then he sent to David at Hebron and asked for a sworn pledge h that he would own him as a comrade and friend when once he had persuaded the people to revolt from Saul's son and caused David to be Abenner to furnish a first proof of carrying out their iii. 18. agreement by recovering for him the wife who had been purchased by him with great perils and the heads of six hundred a Philistines, which he had brought as payment for her to her father Saul. Accordingly, Abenner took Melchale b away from Opheltias c who was then living with her, and sent her to David, Jebosthos also assisting in the matter, for David had written to him that he had a just claim to recover his wife. Then Abenner called together the elders Abner's of the people and the lower officers and the captains the Israelof a thousand,d and addressed them, saying that ites in when they had prepared to revolt from Jebosthos Barid, and to join David's side, he had dissuaded them from 2 Sam. this attempt, but that now he gave them leave to go where they liked, his reason being that he knew that God, through the prophet Samuel, had chosen David king of all the Hebrews and had foretold that none other than he would chastise the Philistines and, by his victories, make them subject. When the elders and the leaders heard this and perceived that Abenner's view of the situation was in agreement with that which they themselves had previously held, they changed over to David's side; and when they had been won over, Abenner called together the tribe of Benjamin-for it was from this tribe that all the body-

David and had departed a little while before, after reaching an understanding and agreement about the sovereignty, he feared that David might give him honours of the first rank as one who would help him in securing the kingdom and who was, besides, apt in understanding matters of state and in seizing opportunities, while he himself might be set down and deprived of his command. He therefore took a dishonest and evil course; first of all he attempted to calumniate Abenner to the king, urging him to be on his guard and not to pay attention to the agreements Abenner had made; for he was doing everything, he said, in order to secure the sovereignty for

Saul's son, and, after having come to David with deceit and guile, he had now gone away with the hope of realizing his wish and carrying out his carefully laid plans. But as he could not persuade David by these means and saw that he was not moved to anger, he turned to a course still bolder, and, having decided to kill Abenner, sent men in pursuit of him, to whom he gave orders that when they came up with him they should call to him in David's name and say that he had certain things to discuss with him concerning their affairs, which he had forgotten to mention when Abenner was with him. When Abenner heard this Josb from the messengers—they had come upon him at a treacher-ously slays certain place called Bēsēra, twenty stades distant Abner. from Hebron—he turned back with no suspicion of ²/₂₆ Sam. iii. what was to come. Joab met him at the gate and greeted him with the greatest show of goodwill and friendship—for very often those who undertake disgraceful acts assume the part of truly good men, in order to avert suspicion of their design-and then, having drawn him apart from his attendants, as if to speak with him privately, led him to a more deserted part of the gate, where he was alone with his brother Abisai, drew his sword and struck him under the flank. So died Abenner through this treachery of Joab, who claimed to have done it to avenge his brother Asaēl, for when he had pursued Abenner, the latter had caught and slain him in the fight near Hebron c; but in truth it was because he feared for his command of the army and his place of honour with the king, of which he himself might have been Σεειράμ, Luc. From this one may perceive to what Reflections lengths of recklessness men will go for the sake of ambition. ambition and power, and in order not to let these go to another; for, in their desire to acquire them, they obtain them through innumerable acts of wrongdoing and, in their fear of losing them, they ensure the continuance of their possession by much worse acts, their belief being that it is not so great an evil to fail to obtain a very great degree of authority as to lose it after having become accustomed to the benefits derived therefrom. Since this last would be a surpassing misfortune, they accordingly contrive and attempt even more ruthless deeds, always in fear of losing what they have.a But concerning such matters it is enough to have discoursed thus briefly.

I suspect that it has arisen from a careless reading of the Targum, which translates "the name of the second (son was) Rechab" by shum tinyānā etc.; tinyānā, "second," was taken as a proper name and corrupted to Thaenos etc. in the Greek.

b Scripture says merely "all night."

and twenty thousand, armed with shield, spear, helmet and sword.a The other tribes also used swords. All this multitude, then, assembled before David at Hebron, with a great supply of grain, wine and all sorts of food, and with one voice confirmed David as king. For three days the people feasted and made good cheer at Hebron, and then David with all of them departed from there and came to Jerusalem.

(iii. 1) But the Jebusites who inhabited the city and David were of the Canaanite race shut their gates against him Jerusalem and placed on the wall those who had lost an eye or from the a leg or were crippled in any way, to mock at the 2 Sam. v. 6; king; these cripples, they said, would prevent him 1 Chron. xi. 4. from entering, and they so acted because of their sublime confidence b in the strength of their walls. David's wrath, however, was aroused and he began to besiege Jerusalem. By displaying great zeal and ardour in order to show his strength at once by the capture of the city, and to strike terror into any others who might treat him in the same manner as the Jebusites had done, he took the lower city by As the citadel d still remained, the king decided to increase his soldiers' ardour for their task by the promise of honour and rewards, and offered to give to any man who should climb up to the citadel from the valley that lay beneath it and capture it, the command of all the people in war. They all vied with each other to make the climb and, in their desire for the post of commander, did not draw back from facing any difficulty, but Joab, the son of Saruia, 1 Chron outdistanced the others and, when he had reached xi. 6. the top, shouted to the king, claiming the office of commander.

(2) When David had driven the Jebusites out of the Jerusalem citadel and had himself rebuilt Jerusalem, he called it fortified by David. the City of David and continued to dwell in it for the 2 Sam. v. 9. whole length of time that he reigned. Now the time that he ruled over the tribe of Judah alone at Hebron was seven years and six months. But after he had chosen Jerusalem for his royal residence, he enjoyed ever more brilliant fortune because of God's provident care in enhancing it and causing it to increase. Eiromos a also, the king of Tyre, wrote to him, proposing friendship and alliance, and sent him gifts of cedar wood and skilled men as carpenters and builders to construct a palace in Jerusalem. And David enclosed the lower city b and joined it to the citadel so as to form one whole,c and, having put a wall around this, appointed Joab keeper of the walls. Thus David, who was the first to drive the Jebusites out of Jerusalem, named the city after himself d; for in the time of our forefather Abraham it was called

b Variant "upper city." In view of the uncertainty as to the ancient topography, it is difficult to establish Josephus's text on the basis of 2 Sam. v. 9, "And David built around from Millo and inwards." The meaning and location of "Millo" are not certain. Probably Scripture means that David joined the northern part of the E. hill (the citadel) to the southern spur, the Ophel (the lower city).

[&]quot; But afterwards" etc.: text doubtful. The MSS. read "but some say that afterwards Homer called it Hierosolyma"; these words are probably a gloss, although in Ap. i. 172 f. Josephus, quoting from the Greek poet Choerilus (a contemporary of Herodotus), who alludes to the "Solymian hills" after Homer (Od. v. 283), identifies them with Jerusalem. In view of the reference in B.J. vi. 438 f. (cf. also A. i. 180) to Melchizedek, who "gave the city, previously called Solyma, the name of Jerusalem," Niese (Praef. vol. i. p. xxxii) has reconstructed the present passage as follows: μετὰ ταῦτα δ΄ αὐτὴν Μελχισεδέκης ὁ τῶν Χαναναίων δυνάστης τειχίσας καὶ ἀσφαλισάμενος Ἱεροσόλυμα ὧνόμασε το γὰρ Ιεροῦ κατὰ τὴν Ἑβραίων γλῶττάν ἐστιν ἀσφάλεια, "afterwards Melchisedekēs, the ruler of the Canaanites, built walls around it and made it secure, and called it Hierosolyma, for hierou in Hebrew means 'security.'" Niese questions 394

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, VII. 67-69

Solyma, but afterwards they named it Hierosolyma, calling the temple (hieron) Solyma, which, in the Hebrew tongue, means "security." a Now the whole period from the time of Joshua, the commander of the expedition and war against the Canaanites in which he conquered them and apportioned this (city) to the Hebrews b—although the Israelites were not able to drive the Canaanites out of Jerusalem—until David took it from them by siege, was five hundred and fifteen years.c

(3) I shall also make mention here of Oronnas, a who was a wealthy Jebusite but was not slain by David in the siege of Jerusalem because of his friend-liness to the Hebrews and also because of a certain kindness and devotion to the king himself which I shall the genuineness of the reference to the temple $(i\epsilon\rho\delta\nu)$ in our text, but it is difficult to believe that Josephus connected hierou (as Niese gives it), rather than Solyma, with the Hebrew word for "security," i.e. $sh\bar{a}l\delta m$.

^b Jos. x. 5 ff.

o This figure agrees with that in A. viii. 61, where Josephus reckons 592 years from the Exodus to the building of the temple in Solomon's fourth year (Scripture gives 480 years for this period, 1 Kings vi. 1); if we subtract from 592 the sum of 77 years (40 years for the activity of Moses +33 years for David's reign in Jerusalem +4 years for the reign of Solomon before the building of the temple), we get the above figure of 515 years for the period between the conquest of Canaan by Joshua and the conquest of Jerusalem by David. But Josephus has no consistent scheme of Biblical chronology, for in A. xx. 230 and Ap. ii. 19 he gives 612 instead of 592 years for the interval between the Exodus and the building of the temple. Moreover, Weill finds that the figures given in A. bks. v.-vii. for the various judges and rulers between Joshua and Solomon add up to only $504\frac{1}{2}$ years.

It is impossible to restore the correct forms of these names in Josephus's text, except those of Nathan and Solomon. Moreover, three separate lists are found in Scripture and neither in the Hebrew nor in the Greek do the various lists exactly agree. · Bibl. Tamar, LXX Θαμάρ, Θημάρ.

d Scripture implies that none of the eleven were sons of concubines, I Chron. iii. 9 "all these were the sons of David beside the sons of the concubines." The preceding verse, however, ends with the word "nine" (wrongly reckoning the number of sons), and Josephus apparently took it to refer to the number of well-born sons.

e So the LXX in Chronicles; in Samuel the LXX has Τυτάνων (cf. the variant in Josephus); bibl. Valley of Rephaim. Rephaim was traditionally taken to mean "giants." The site is probably the modern el Buqei'a, the plain S.W. of Jerusalem.

In Scripture David consults God directly.

Let no one, however, suppose that it was a small army of Philistines that came against the Hebrews, or infer from the swiftness of their defeat or from their failure to perform any courageous or noteworthy act that there was any reluctance or cowardice on their part; on the contrary, it should be known that all Syria and Phoenicia and beside them many other warlike nations fought along with them and took part in the war.b It was for this pavid's reason alone that, after having been defeated so second victory often and lost so many tens of thousands, they over the attacked the Hebrews with a larger force. In fact, Philistines. 22; after their discomfiture in these battles, they came 1 Chron. against David with an army three times as large, c xiv. 18. and encamped on the same site. Again the Israelites' king inquired of God concerning the issue of the battle, and the high priest d gave the prophetic warning to hold his army in the so-called Weeping Groves not far from the enemy's camp, and not to move nor begin battle until the grove should be agitated with no wind blowing. And, when the grove was agitated and the moment came which God had foretold to him, he delayed no longer but went out to seize the victory which he saw awaiting him. The enemy's

The plundering of the camp is a detail added by Josephus. Moreover, Scripture mentions the Philistine gods (Heb. "idols") only in connexion with the first battle. According to 1 Chron. xiv. 12 (cf. the Targum on 2 Sam. v. 21) David burnt them.

So then, when all the people had assembled in accordance with this plan, the king came to the ark, and the priests carried it out of the house of Aminadab f and placed it upon a new wagon which they permitted his brothers and sons o to draw with the help of oxen. Josephus follows the LXX in reading 'ehaw "his brothers" for 'Ahyô "Ahio" (the two forms are identical in the consonantal text). The LXX also repeats the phrase οἱ ἀδελφοὶ αὐτοῦ "his brothers," meaning Uzzah's, but Josephus takes the a0700 to refer to Abinadab, Uzzah's father. Finally, the omission of Uzzah's name at this point in Josephus's text may be due to a lacuna, as Niese suspects.

He replied, however, that he was not ashamed of having done what was pleasing to God, who had honoured him above her father and all other men, and that he would often play and dance without caring whether his actions seemed disgraceful to her maid-servants or herself. Now this Michalē, while she lived with David, bore no children, but, after her later marriage to the man b on whom her father Saul bestowed her—at this particular time David, who had taken her away from him was again her husband—she bore five children. But of this we shall treat in its proper place.

(4) When the king saw that almost from day to David plans day his affairs prospered more and more by the will to build a temple, of God, he thought that he should be guilty of sin if, with God while he himself lodged in a lofty dwelling made of 28am. vii. 1; cedar wood and beautifully appointed in other ways, he allowed the ark to lie in a tent. He wished, therefore, to build such a temple to God as Moses had formerly spoken of, and after discussing this with the prophet Nathan, when he bade him do as he was minded, seeing that God was with him to help him in all things, he became still more eager to build the temple. But God appeared to Nathan that very with the handmaids of whom thou hast spoken, with them

b Adriel, the son of Barzillai, 2 Sam. xxi. 8.
c Josephus harmonizes the contradictions in Scripture.
According to 2 Sam. vi. 23 Michal had no children as long as she lived, but 2 Sam. xxi. 8 states that she bore five children to Adriel. Rabbinic tradition following the Targum holds that the five children were Merab's but were brought up by Michal (cf. Luc. which has Merab for Michal in 2 Sam. xxi. 8).

Michal is not mentioned again in our text of Josephus.

4 2 Sam. vii. 18 " and he sat before the Lord (i.e. the ark)." Rappaport suggests that Josephus's paraphrase ("falling on his face" instead of "sat") may have some connexion with the controversy in the Hasmonean period between the partisans of the king and those of the high priests as to whether kings of Davidic lineage had the right to sit in the temple court or not, and that the controversy centred about the interpretation of the verb "sat" in this verse of Scripture.

In Scripture the reference to David's humble origin is found earlier (2 Sam. vii. 8) in God's charge to David by Nathan, and not in David's prayer, as in Josephus.

He waged war against David, king of Judaea, and, after trial of many battles, the last of which was fought beside the Euphrates, where he was defeated, he gained the reputation of being the most vigorous and courageous of kings." In addition, he speaks also of his descendants and tells how, after his death, they succeeded one another in his kingdom and his name. This is what he says: "Upon his death, his posterity reigned for ten generations, each receiving from his father both his authority and his name, as did the Ptolemies in Many Biblical critics recognize that 2 Sam. viii. 17, "And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests," should be corrected to read, " And Zadok and Abiathar the son of Ahimelech the son of Ahitub were the priests." Ahimelech, the father of Abiathar, had been killed earlier by Saul (cf. A. vi. 260 = 1 Sam. xxii. 16 ff.), whereas Abiathar continued to be the chief priest (together with Zadok) until he was removed by Solomon (cf. A. viii. 10 ff. = 1 Kings ii. 26 ff.). Josephus is, therefore, correct in omitting his name here.

David thereupon sent and comforted him, exhorting him to bear his father's death with resignation, and bidding him to look for the continuance of the same friendship that had been with his father. The Ammanite princes, however, received this message in an ugly spirit and not as David had intended it, and incited the king against him by saving that David had sent men to spy on their country and their forces. on the pretext of friendly offices; they advised him to be on his guard and pay no attention to David's words, lest he be tricked and meet with irremediable disaster. To these words of the princes Annon, the king of the Ammanites, gave more credence than they actually deserved, and grievously misused the envoys sent by David by shaving off a half of their beards and cutting off a half of their garments, and then dismissed them to bring back his answer in the form of acts instead of words. At sight of them b the king of the Israelites was indignant and made it plain war with that he would not overlook this insult and outrage, but Ammon and its Syrian would make war on the Ammanites and exact satis-allies. faction from their king for their lawless treatment of ² Sam. x. 5; his envoys. (2) Undismayed either by this confederacy or by the Ammanite force, David put his trust in God and in the justice of his cause in going to war to avenge the insult he had suffered, and, giving Joab, his commander-in-chief, the flower of his army, at once sent him against them. Joab pitched his camp close to the Ammanite capital Rabatha. Then the enemy issued forth with their men drawn up not in one body but in two, for the auxiliary force was stationed by itself in the plain, and the Ammanite army at the gates, opposite the Hebrews. When Joab saw this, he contrived counter-measures; he selected the bravest of his men and drew them up over against Syros and the kings with him; the rest he turned over to his brother Abisai, with orders to draw them up over against the Ammanites, and, if he saw the Syrians pressing him hard and getting the better of him, to bring over his division and assist him; he himself would do the same if he saw Abisai being worn down by the Ammanites. Then, after encouraging his brother and exhorting him to fight bravely and with an ardour expected of men who fear disgrace, he sent him off to face the Ammanites in battle, while he himself engaged the Syrians. Although the latter resisted stoutly for a short time, Joab slew many of them and compelled all the rest to turn and flee. At this sight the Ammanites, who were afraid of Abisai and his army, waited no longer, but followed the example of their allies and fled to their city. Having thus overcome the enemy, Joab returned in triumph to the king at Jerusalem.

(3) This defeat did not persuade the Ammanites to remain quiet or to keep the peace in the knowledge that their enemy was superior. Instead they sent to Chalamas, the king of the Syrians across the Euphrates, and hired him as an ally with his commander-in-chief Sebekos and eighty thousand infantry and ten thousand cavalry. When the king of the Hebrews learned that the Ammanites had again assembled a very large force against him, he decided not to conduct the war through generals any longer, but himself crossed the river Jordan with his entire force and, when he met them, engaged them in a

Upon the conclusion of the battle in this manner, the Mesopotamians surrendered to David and sent him gifts. Then, as it was the winter season, he returned to Jerusalem; but, at the beginning of spring, he sent his commander-in-chief Joab to make war on the Ammanites. When the man told him that everything had gone as they wished, he took some portions of his supper and gave them to him with the command to go home to his wife and rest with her. Uriah, however, did not do so but slept near the king with the other armour-bearers. And, when the king learned of this, he inquired of him why he had not gone to his house after so long a period of absence, saying that this was the natural thing for men to do when they return from abroad. To this he replied that it was not right for him to enjoy luxurious rest in the company of his wife, while his fellow-soldiers and his commander were sleeping on the ground in their camp in enemy territory. When he had so spoken, the king ordered him to remain there that day, saying that he would send him back to the commander-in-chief on the morrow. So Uriah was invited to supper by the king and continued drinking until he was intoxicated, as the king deliberately pledged his health in cup after cup. Nevertheless he again slept before the king's door and felt no desire for his wife. In great displeasure at this, the king David plans wrote to Joab, ordering him to punish Uriah, whom death. he made out to be a guilty man b; and, in order that 2 Sam. xi. 14 he himself should not appear to have willed his punishment, he suggested the manner of it, which was to order Uriah to be stationed opposite the most formidable part of the enemy, where, if left to fight alone, he would be in greatest danger; he also ordered his comrades in arms to retire when the battle began. When he had written this letter and stamped it with his own seal, he gave it to Uriah to carry to Joab. On receiving the letter and learning from it the king's intention, Joab stationed Uriah at the place where he knew the enemy had been most troublesome to himself, and gave him some of the bravest men in the army. He also said that he would come to his assistance with his whole force if they could throw down part of the wall and enter the city. He therefore asked Uriah, as a good soldier and as one who was esteemed by the king and by all his countrymen for his bravery, to welcome his difficult task rather than object to it. And when Uriah eagerly undertook the work. Joab privately instructed the men who were stationed with him to desert him when they saw the enemy charge. Now when the Hebrews attacked the city, the Ammanites, in their fear that the enemy might surprise them by climbing up at the point where Uriah happened to be posted, put their bravest men in front and, suddenly opening the gates, rushed out upon the enemy with great violence and speed. At sight of them, the men with Uriah all retreated, as Joab had instructed them. But Uriah, who was ashamed to flee and abandon his post, remained to face the foe, and met their charge, slaying not a few; but finally, being surrounded on

^a The account of Uriah's death is greatly amplified. Cf. 2 Sam. xi. 16, 17 "And it came to pass, when Joab kept watch upon (or "invested") the city, that he assigned Uriah unto the place where he knew that valiant men were. And the men of the city went out and fought with Joab, and there fell some of the people of the servants of David, and Uriah the Hittite died also."

all sides, he was caught and killed, and along with him there fell a few others from among his comrades.a

(2) After this had taken place Joab sent messengers Joab to the king, instructing them to tell him that he had informs David of made every effort to take the city quickly, but that, Uriah's after an assault on the wall, he had lost many men death. and had been forced to retire; they were, he said, to add to this, if they saw that the king was wrathful, the news of Uriah's death. But when the king heard the messengers' report, he was greatly displeased and said that the army had blundered in assaulting the wall, b whereas they ought to have tried to take the city with mines and engines, especially as they had before them the example of Abimelech, the son of Gedeon, who, in his attempt to take the town of Thebae d by force, had been struck down by a rock hurled by an old woman and, in spite of being so very brave, had ignominiously perished because of his unfortunate method of attack. And with this in mind they ought not to have approached the enemy's wall, for it was best to have in mind all things that had been tried in war, whether successfully or otherwise, under the same conditions of danger, in order to imitate the one and avoid the other. But when,

on hearing the messenger's report, show displeasure at Joab's conduct of the siege, but it is Joab himself who anticipates David's displeasure and his reference to the incident of Abimelech. The LXX has an additional verse, in which David repeats almost verbatim the criticism anticipated by Joab. Josephus simplifies matters by attributing the speech to David after the messenger's report.

while he was in this humour, he was further informed by the messenger of Uriah's death, he ceased being angry and ordered him to go back and tell Joab that what had happened was human destiny, and such was the nature of war that now one of the opposing sides happened to be successful therein, and now the other; for the future, however, they should look to the siege and avoid meeting with another reverse in the course of it. They should rather besiege the city with mounds and engines and, after forcing it to surrender, raze it to the ground and destroy all those within it.a So the messenger hastened to carry back to Joab the commands of the king, while Beethsabe, the wife of Uriah, learning of her husband's death, mourned for him many days. But, as soon as she had ceased grieving and weeping for Uriah, the king took her to wife, and had by her a son.

whom was wealthy and possessed many herds of beasts of burden, sheep and cattle, while the other had only one ewe lamb. This he brought up with his own children, sharing his food with it and giving it the same affection that one would give one's own daughter. Now once, when the wealthy man was visited by a guest, he did not see fit to slaughter one of his own animals for the feasting of his friend, but he sent men to take away the ewe lamb from the poor man, and prepared it for the delectation of his guest." This story greatly distressed the king and he declared to Nathan that the man who had had the heart to do this thing was a villain, and that it was just that he repay the lamb fourfold a and in addition be punished with death. Nathan thereupon Nathan rejoined that David himself was the one who deserved accuses David and this punishment, having been condemned by him-reveals his self of perpetrating a great and terrible crime. should be plotted against by this same son; and for this sin, which he had committed secretly, he should suffer the penalty in the sight of all. Furthermore the son whom she would bear him would die soon after birth.a At these words the king was dismaved and greatly troubled, and with tears of grief admitted his impiety-for he was, as all agreed, a god-fearing man and never sinned in his life except in the matter of Uriah's wife-, whereupon God took pity on him and was reconciled to him. And He promised to preserve both his life and his kingdom, for, He said, now that he repented of his deeds, He was no longer displeased with him. Then Nathan, after prophesying these things to the king, returned to his home.

Instead he put on a black gar-xii. 15. ment and, throwing himself upon sackcloth, lay on the ground, beseeching God to spare the life of the child, whose mother he so deeply loved. But on the seventh day the child died, and the servants dared not inform the king, for they feared that when he learned of it he might even more completely refuse food and other necessary care, in his desolation at the death of his son, seeing that even during the child's illness he had, in his grief, so greatly afflicted himself. The king, however, perceived that they were disturbed and were acting in such a manner as is usual with those who wish to conceal something, and so he realized that the child had died. Then he called to him one of his servants and, when he learned the truth, he arose, bathed, put on a white a garment and went to the tent of God; and when he ordered a meal to be prepared for him, he caused great astonishment at his strange conduct among his relatives and servants, because he had done none of these things during the child's illness, and was suddenly doing them now that he was dead. So, having first requested permission to inquire, they asked him to tell them the reason for these acts. Thereupon he called them dullards, and explained that while the child was still alive, he had hoped for its recovery and had therefore done everything proper, with the thought of rendering God gracious to him by such means; but now that it was dead, he no longer had any need of vain grief. At these words they praised the king's wisdom and under-Birth of standing. Then David lay with his wife Beethsabē, 2 Sam. xii.

^a The details of the siege are an amplification of 2 Sam. xii. 27, "And Joab sent messengers to David, and said, I have fought against Rabbah, and I have taken the city of waters."

were dependent on a small well and this had to be carefully controlled in order that the spring might not fail them altogether because of too frequent use. Accordingly, he wrote to the king, informing him of this and inviting him to come to the capture of the city in order that he might have the victory ascribed to himself. Upon receiving Joab's letter, the king commended his loyalty and faithfulness; then he took along the force that was with him and came for the sacking of Rabatha, which he took by force and allowed his soldiers to plunder. He himself took the crown of the Ammanite king, b which weighed a talent of gold and had in its centre a precious stone, a sardonyx c; and thereafter David always wore it on his own head.d He also found much other splendid and valuable spoil in the city. As for the inhabitants, he tortured them and put them to death. And the other Ammanite cities, which he took by force, he treated in the same way.

It may be noted that in A. iii. 165 Josephus uses σαρδόνυξ to translate Heb. eben šōhām "onyx" (?), LXX σμάραγδος "emerald" (?) of Ex. xxviii. 9, while in A. iii. 168 he uses the same word to translate Heb. 'odem " sardius " (A.V. " carnelian "), LXX σάρδιον of Ex. xxviii. 17. Evidently Josephus, like the LXX translators, was not sure of the meaning of some Heb. names of precious stones; the same uncertainty marks our renderings to-day.

^d It is not clear from Scripture whether David thereafter wore the crown or only the jewel in it.

The Heb. text of 2 Sam. xii. 31 is obscure and probably corrupt, leaving it uncertain whether the Ammonites were tortured or merely put to forced labour. It is probable that Josephus omits the Scriptural details because of the difficulty of the text.

was still a virgin and of such striking beauty that she surpassed all the fairest women; her name was Thamara a and she had the same mother as Absalom. Now the eldest of David's sons, Amnon, fell in love with her but, since he could not obtain his desire because of her virginity and because she was closely guarded, b he became very ill and, as the pain consumed his body, he wasted away and lost his colour. His unhappy state then became apparent to a certain Jonathes, a relative and friend and a man who was exceedingly clever and sharp-witted. So when he saw Amnon every morning in a bodily state that was not natural, he went up to him and asked him to tell him the reason, but, he said, he himself guessed that he was in this state as a result of love-sickness.d And Amnon confessed his passion, saying that he was in love with his sister on the father's side, whereupon the other suggested to him an ingenious way of obtaining his wishes. He advised him to feign illness and, when his father came to him, to request him to send his sister to wait on him. If he did this. he said, he would get better and would soon be rid of his illness. Accordingly, Amnon took to his bed and, following Jonathes' suggestion, pretended to be ill. When they had done as he ordered, he asked his sister to serve the meal to him in his inner chamber, and the maid did so, whereupon he took hold of her and attempted to persuade her to lie with him. But the girl cried out and said, "Oh no, do not force me to this nor be so impious, my brother, as to transgress the law and bring upon yourself dreadful shame. Give up this unrighteous and unholy desire, from which our house will reap only disgrace and ill fame." She further counselled him to speak of the matter with his father, for he would consent to their marriage. Thus she spoke in order to escape for the moment from the violence of his lust. He, however, did not listen to her, but, burning with desire and goaded by the spur of passion, violated his sister. But no sooner had Amnon ravished d her than he was filled with loathing of her. evidently permitted in David's time, although prohibited in the law ascribed to Moses, Lev. xviii. 6 ff. The rabbis, attempting to reconcile this early practice with the Mosaic law, explained that Tamar's mother had given birth to her before being converted to Judaism, and that therefore and, heaping abuse upon her head, he ordered her to rise and be gone. And when she denounced it as a still worse outrage that, after himself violating her. he did not allow her to remain until night but ordered her to depart immediately in broad daylight that she might encounter witnesses of her shame, he told his servant to throw her out. Then, in her distress at the outrage and the violence done her, she rent her tunic-in ancient times virgins wore long-sleeved tunics reaching to the ankle, a in order not to be exposed—and poured ashes on her head and went away through the midst b of the city, crying aloud and bewailing the violence she had suffered. Her brother Absalom meeting her inquired what misfortune had befallen her that she acted in this way. And when she told him of the outrage, he exhorted her to be quiet and to take it calmly and not consider herself outraged in having been ravished by her brother. So she obeyed him and ceased crying and publishing the violation abroad, and remained desolate c in the house of her brother Absalom.

him in turn, to spare her son's life for her sake and not further deprive her of her last remaining hope of support in her old age. This, she said, the king would secure to her by preventing those who wished to kill her son from so doing, for nothing would restrain them from their purpose except their fear of him. And when he acceded to the woman's petition, she again addressed him with these words, "I do indeed thank you for your kindness in taking pity on my old age and on my near-childlessness, but, in order that I may have full assurance of your humane treatment of me, be first reconciled to your own son and let your anger toward him cease. For how should I be persuaded that you have truly granted me this kindness if you yourself still feel hate toward your son for a like reason? It would be utterly unreasonable if, after one son has perished against your will, you were willingly to cause the death of another." a Then the king perceived that this pretended case was an invention of Joab and due to his zeal for Absalom's cause. And when, by questioning the old woman, he learned that it was so in truth, he summoned Joab to tell him that he had gained his end, and he bade him bring Absalom, for he was no longer hostile to him but had already got over his anger and displeasure. Thereupon Joab did obeisance to the king, receiving his words with joy, and at once set out for Gessūra, from which place he brought Absalom back with him to Jerusalem.

The Targum and Jewish tradition recognize that the expression $miqq\bar{e}s$ $y\bar{e}mim$ $ley\bar{e}mim$ generally means "from year to year," but some rabbis took it here, as did Josephus, to mean "from week to week," explaining that Absalom was permitted, though a Nazirite, to clip it slightly every week because his hair was particularly heavy (Ginzberg v. 105).

Now he had not suffered any loss of beauty through sorrow or the lack of care proper to a king's son, but was still remarkable and distinguished among all for his looks and bodily stature, and surpassed even those who lived in great luxury. Furthermore, so great was the thickness of his hair that he could scarcely cut it within a week,a its weight being two hundred shekels, which equal five minae. b He dwelt, however, in Jerusalem two years and became the father of three sons and of one very beautiful daughter, whom Solomon's son Roboamos o married later and by whom he had a son named Abias.d Then Absalom himself sent to written "four minae" instead of "five minae" overlooks the fact that in Josephus's time there was a mina of forty shekels as well as one of fifty (cf. S. Krauss, Talmudische Archäologie, ii. 406). But it must be admitted that Josephus is as inconsistent in metrology as in chronology, cf. A. xiv. 106 note.

^o Bibl. Rehoboam, 1xx Poβοάμ. The Heb. at this point mentions Absalom's daughter Tamar (whom Josephus calls Thamara in § 244), but not her subsequent marriage to Rehoboam; this detail is found in the LXX addition to this verse, 2 Sam. xiv. 27. Rehoboam's wife is called Maacah-(1 Kings xv. 2; 2 Chron. xi. 20) or Micaiah, the daughter of Uriel (2 Chron. xiii. 2); Luc. removes the difficulty by reading Maacah for Tamar in 2 Sam., but that Josephus here evades it, as Weill supposes, is doubtful in view of § 244. Moreover, instead of evading the difficulty, Josephus resolves it, in A. viii. 249, by making Rehoboam's wife Maacah, a daughter of Absalom's daughter Tamar.

But as Joab paid no attention to this, be sent intercede some of his men to set fire to a field adjacent to him. with David. When Joab heard what had been done, he came to 2 Sam. xiv. 29. Now indeed, that you are before me, I request you to soften my parent toward me, for I hold my return to be a greater misfortune than exile while my father still persists in his anger." Joab was persuaded to do so and, having pity on his need, interceded for him with the king, to whom he spoke about his son and disposed him so favourably toward him that he straightway summoned him into his presence. Then Absalom threw himself upon the ground and asked pardon for his sins, whereupon David raised him up d and promised forgetfulness of what had happened.

(2) There were with him also David's counsellor David learns Achitophel the Gelmonite b and two hundred men of Absalom's plot and from Jerusalem itself, who knew nothing of the busi-flees from ness in hand, but thought themselves summoned to 2 Sam. a sacrifice; and he was chosen by them all as king, xv. 12. as he had contrived should be done. When these things were reported to David and he heard of these unexpected acts of his son, he was both alarmed and surprised at his impiety and audacity, for Absalom was not even mindful of having been pardoned for his sins, but was guilty of much greater acts of lawlessness in having designs upon the kingship, which, in the first place, had not been given him by God and, in the second place, involved the removal of his parent. He therefore decided to flee to the country across the Jordan. And he called together his closest friends and, having taken counsel with them concerning his son's madness, committed

Ethis b the Gittite also set out with him, having overcome the objections of David who had tried to persuade him to stay, and in this way he showed his loyalty even more clearly. Now as David was ascending the Mount of Olives with bare feet and with all his company in tears, news was brought to him that Achitophel was with Absalom and now belonged to his party. And when David heard this, his grief was intensified and he called upon God, beseeching Him to alienate Absalom's feeling from Achitophel, for he feared that his hostile counsels might prove persuasive to him, as those of a man of ready wit and quick to see an advantage.c And when he reached the crest d of the mountain, he gazed

And, when he was asked where he had left Memphibosthos, he said, "In Jerusalem," where he was waiting to be chosen king in the midst of the prevailing confusion, in recognition of the benefits which Saul had conferred on the people. In his indignation at this, David made a present to Siba of all that he had granted to Memphibosthos, for, he said, he recognized that he had a far juster claim to possess them than had the other. (4) When David came to Choranos, a as the place Shimei was called, there came out a relative of Saul, named (Samuis) Samuis, the son of Gera, who threw stones at him David. 2 Sam. and abused him. And although the king's friends xvi. 5. stood around him and protected him, Samuis only continued the more to curse him and denounce him as one stained with blood and as the author of many crimes. He also bade him leave the country as one under a ban and accursed; and he gave thanks to God for having deprived David of his kingdom and for having exacted punishment of him, through his own son, for the crimes which he had committed against his master.c Though they were all provoked to anger at him, especially Abisai, who wished to make an end of him, David restrained his anger, saying, "Let us not add to our present ills by causing new ones to arise, for certainly no feeling of shame or concern touches me on account of this cur's d raving against me; but I submit to God, by whom this fellow has been moved to frenzy against us. Nor is there anything strange in my being so treated by him, when I have experienced the impiety of a son. Nevertheless, God's compassion will rest on us, and we shall overcome our enemies by His will." (5) As soon as Absalom and Achitophel, his adviser, Absalom arrived at Jerusalem with all the people, David's consults Hushai and friend a came to them and did obeisance to him, Ahitophel. praying for him that his kingship should continue 2 sam. always and for all time. And when Absalom asked him just why he, who was one of his father's best friends and supposed to be altogether faithful to him, was not now with him, but had deserted him and had gone over to himself, he made a skilful and prudent reply, saying that one ought to follow God and the entire people. "Now, my lord, since they are with you, it is fitting that I too should follow, for you have received the kingdom from God. Furthermore, I shall show the same faithfulness and loyalty to you, if I am accounted a friend, as you know I gave to your father. There is no good reason," he added, "to be dissatisfied with the present state of things, for the kingship has not passed to another house, but remains in the same one, since the king's son has succeeded to it." These words of his won over Absalom, who had before suspected him, and he called Achitophel to deliberate with him about what should be done. The latter advised him to lie with his father's concubines, for, he said, by this act the people would know with certainty that Absalom could not be reconciled to him, and they would join with great eagerness in the fight against his father; up to that time they had been afraid to proceed to open hostility because of their expectation that the two would reach an understanding.b Taking this

(6) After Absalom had acted on the advice given Hushai persuades him by Achitophel, he requested him to give him Absalom further counsel, this time concerning the war against to reject Ahitophel's his father. Thereupon he asked him for ten thousand b advice. picked men, and promised to kill his father and bring 2 Sam. back his men alive o; then, he said, with David no longer alive, his throne would be secure. Absalom was pleased with this proposal, but also summoned Chūsis, David's chief friend d-so David called him -and, after informing him of Achitophel's proposal, inquired what he too thought of it. But Chusis, perceiving that, if Achitophel's advice were acted on, David would be in danger of being captured and put to death, e attempted to introduce a counter-proposal. "You are not ignorant, O King," he said, " of the bravery of your father and the men with him, or that he has fought many wars and in every case has come off victorious against the enemy. Just now it is likely that he is remaining within the camp, for he is a very able general and can foresee the ruse of an d The variant φίλον "friend" in MSS. SP is probably due to the copyists taking $\dot{a}ρχι$ in $\dot{a}ρχιφιλον$ "chief friend" as a proper name, as does the LXX, translating Heb. "Hushai the Arcite," cf. § 203 note. A parallel to Josephus's term is afforded by the LXX of 1 Chron. XXVII. 33, where Hushai is called πρῶτος φίλος τοῦ βασιλέως "first friend of the king."

 This reflection of Hushai is an amplification of Scripture. 475 attacking enemy; but toward evening a he will leave his men and will hide himself in some hollow, or will wait in ambush behind some rock. And when our force attacks, his men will give way for a little, but then they will take heart at the thought that the king is beside them, and will make a stand against us; in the meantime, while the fight is going on, your father will suddenly appear and will inspire them to face danger valiantly, but into your men he will strike terror. Therefore weigh well my counsel also in your mind and, recognizing that it is the best, reject the proposal of Achitophel. And send throughout the entire land of the Hebrews, summoning them to the campaign against your father; then lead out your force and take personal command of the war, and do not entrust it to another. For you may look to defeat him easily if you take him in the open with few men about him, while you yourself have many tens of thousands ready to show their zeal and ardour on your behalf. But if your father shuts himself up to stand a siege, we shall destroy that city by means of engines and mines.b" This speech of Chūsis met with more favour than Achitophel's, for his proposal was preferred by Absalom to the other's. It was God, however, who contrived that Chūsis's counsel should seem better to his way of thinking.

(7) Then Chusis hastened to the high priests Sadok Absalom's and Abiathar, and, having told them all about reported

Achitophel's proposal and his own, and also that it to David. had been decided to act upon his advice, he bade 2 Sam. them send information of this to David and make plain to him what counsel had been given, and exhort him further to cross the Jordan as quickly as possible lest his son change his mind, set out in pursuit of him, and take him by surprise before he could reach a place of safety. Now the high priests had purposely kept their sons in hiding outside the city a in order that they might bring David word of what occurred. So they sent a faithful maidservant to bring them news of Absalom's plans, and instructed them to make haste and report these to David. And they, without any delay or hesitation, set off with their fathers' instructions, like obedient and loyal helpers. And, deciding that speed and dispatch were the best form of service, they made all haste to meet David. Bibl. "and the woman took and spread the covering over the well's mouth and strewed groats thereon"; "groats is the A.V.'s rendering of Heb. riphôth, a word of uncertain meaning, Targum diqûlân "dates" (?) (perhaps a variant of deqûqân "grits"), Lxx (transliterating) ἀραφώθ, Luc. παλάθας "fruit-cakes." The Jewish commentators explain riphôth as "crushed wheat." It is just possible that the Lxx ἀραφώθ was vaguely connected by Josephus with ἔριφοι "kids," which he supposed equivalent to ἐρίων " wool."

and, when those in pursuit of them came and inquired about them, asking whether she had caught sight of them, she did not deny having seen them; they had, she said, drunk at her house and then had gone away. If, however, they pursued them hotly, they would, she predicted, overtake them. But, though they did pursue for a considerable distance, they did not overtake them, and so they turned back. And, when the woman saw them ride away, and that there was no longer any fear of the youths being captured by them, she drew them up out of the well and urged them to continue on their appointed way. b So, after travelling with great haste and speed, they came to David and informed him in detail c of all Absalom's plans; and he thereupon commanded his men to cross the Jordan, although it was already night, and permitted no delay on that account.

(8) Now Achitophel, when his proposal failed of Ahitophel's acceptance, mounted his beast and set off for Gelmon, and suicide, and suicide, his native city. And, having called together all his 2 Sam. people, he recounted to them the advice he had given xvii. 28. spirit than surrender himself to David to be punished for having in all ways helped Absalom against him.a After this speech he went into the innermost part b of the house and hanged himself. Such was the death to which Achitophel, as his own judge, sentenced himself, and his relatives cut him down from the rope and gave him burial. But David, having, David is as we said before, crossed the Jordan, came to The Welcomed at Camps, a very fine and well-fortified city. There (The Camps). he was most cordially received by the leading men 2 Sam. xvii. of the region, both out of regard for his feelings as 24, 27. an exile and in honour of his former greatness. These were Berzelaios d the Galadite. Seiphar. the ruler of Ammanitis, and Macheiros, the chief man h of the country of Galaditis. They supplied him and his men liberally with everything needed, so that beds with covering were not lacking, nor bread and wine; moreover, they provided an abundance of slaughtered animals and furnished a plentiful supply of all things necessary for the refreshment and nourishment of exhausted men.

(x. 1) Such, then, was their position. As for The armies Absalom, having collected a great army of Hebrews of Absalom and David he led them against his father, and crossing the river prepare for battle, Jordan, halted not far from The Camps in the 2 Sam. country of Galaditis. a relative of the latter, for his father was Jethraos a and his mother was Abigaia, and she and Sarūia, the mother of Joab, were both sisters of David. Now 2 Sam when David numbered his men and found that they xviii. L were some four thousand, b he decided not to wait for Absalom to attack him, but appointed captains of thousands and captains of hundreds to the men he had with him, and divided the army into three parts; one division he entrusted to Joab, another to the latter's brother Abisai, while the third part he turned over to Ethaios, who was his comrade and friend although he came from the city of Gitta. He himself wished to go out with them to battle, but his friends would not allow it and kept him back by a very wise decision; for they said that if they were defeated with him present, they would lose every fair hope, but if, on the other hand, one part of their force were beaten and they fell back upon David with the remainder, he would bring them renewed strength, and the enemy would probably suspect that there was still another army with him.d So David took this advice and decided to remain at The Camps himself while he sent out his friends and generals to war, exhorting them to show themselves eager and faithful and mindful of whatever fair treatment they might have received from him. He also implored them to spare his son Absalom, if they were victorious, assumes that each of the three generals had more than a thousand men. • Called Ethis in § 201; bibl. Ittai.

^a This argument is an amplification or an interpretation of the obscure text in 2 Sam. xviii. 3, which seems to mean simply that even if David's men were routed, the enemy would consider it less important than David's capture.

Variant "was pleased with this advice."This exhortation is an addition to Scripture.

threatening to do himself some injury if Absalom met his death. And so, with a prayer for their victory, he sent his army out.a

(2) Then Joab drew up his force opposite the enemy Absalom's in a great plain bordered by a wood in the rear, and force is Absalom led out his troops against him. In the 2 Sam. ensuing engagement great deeds of strength and xviii. 6. daring were performed on both sides, the one scorning danger and making every effort that David might recover his kingdom, while the other did not shrink from doing or suffering anything to prevent Absalom from being deprived of it and being punished by his father for his rash attempt; moreover, the larger force did its best not to be conquered by Joab's men and generals, who were few in number, for that would have brought upon them the greatest disgrace, while, on the other hand, David's soldiers were ambitious to conquer so many tens of thousands, and for these reasons the battle was a fierce one. Finally David's men were victorious because of their greater vigour and knowledge of war. And they pursued the fleeing enemy through woods and ravines, capturing some, but slaying so many that more fell in flight than on the field of battle; for there fell on that day some twenty thousand. Then all of David's men went Absalom after Absalom, who was plainly visible to them be-entangled cause of his beauty and great stature, and he, in by his hair fear of being captured by his enemies, mounted his xviii. 9.

As he rode along at full speed, he was lifted up by the unsteady motion, and his hair became entangled in a rugged tree with great branches extending far out, and in this strange fashion he remained suspended. But his swiftly moving beast went on further as though still carrying his master on his back, while Absalom swung from the branches, which held him up.a This was seen by one of David's soldiers, who informed Joab of it, and, when the commander said he would have given him fifty b shekels if he had struck Absalom and killed him, he replied, " Not if you had been ready to give me a thousand, would I have treated my master's son in that way, especially as we all heard him plead that the youth's life be spared." Joab there- Joab kills upon ordered him to show him where he had seen Absalom. Absalom hanging, and shot an arrow c into his heart xviii. 14. and killed him. Then Joab's armour-bearers surrounded the tree and pulled down the corpse,d and, casting it into a deep yawning pit, they threw stones into this until it filled up and took on the form and size of a tomb. Meanwhile Joab sounded the retreat and kept his own soldiers from pursuing the enemy force, and so spared his countrymen.

have "ten (shekels) of silver," while all texts add "and a girdle."

Bil. "took three darts and thrust them"; the Heb. Sebāţim "darts" is translated by βέλη in the LXX, and by dκίδας in Luc., either of which may mean "arrows" as well.

According to Scripture Joab's ten armour-bearers completed his work by striking Absalom until he was dead.

An interpretation of bibl. "and placed (A.V. "laid up") a very great heap of stones upon him," probably suggested by the fact that the Heb. yassibü "placed" also has the technical meaning of "erect" a monument, grave-stele, etc.

He had, in fact, three sons and one daughter, named Thamara, as we have 2 Sam. said before.d And from her marriage to Solomon's xiv. 27. son Roboamos, there was born a son, Abias, who succeeded to his throne. But of this we shall speak later, in a more suitable part of our history. And so, after the death of Absalom, the people dispersed to their homes.

(4) Then Achimas, the son of the high priest Sadok, Ahimazz went to Joab and asked him for permission to go and brings David announce the victory to David and bring him the news of good news that he had obtained help and guidance victory. from God. Joab replied that it was not fitting that 2 Sam. he who had always been a messenger of good tidings should now go and inform the king of his son's death, and so asked him to stay, while he called Chūsis f and charged him with the task of reporting to the king what he had himself seen. But when Achimas again requested him to entrust the message to him, saving that he would mention only the victory and Absalom the fear that his children might die before him, disposes of the difficulty caused by the contradiction between 2 Sam. xiv. 27, referred to in § 190, and the present verse, 2 Sam. xviii. 18, which reads, "for he said, I have no son to keep my name in remembrance." A rabbinic tradition has it that Absalom's sons died before him as a punishment for having set fire to Joab's field; another tradition states that Absalom left sons "but they were so insignificant that Scripture speaks of them as though he died childless" (Ginzberg, op. cit. vi. 268). 6 A. viii. 249 f.

would keep silence about the death of Absalom, Joab granted him permission to make the journey to David. And so, by striking off into a shorter road, which he alone knew, a he arrived before Chūsis. Now as David sat between the gates, waiting until someone should come from the scene of battle and report how it had gone, one of the look-outs saw Achimas running along, and, though he could not yet recognize who it was, told David that he saw someone coming toward him. The latter replied that it was a messenger of good tidings, and when, a moment later, the man informed him that still another was following, David said that he too was a messenger. Then the lookout recognized Achimas, who was now very close, and announced that the man running toward them was the son of the high priest Sadok. At that, David was overjoyed and said that he was a messenger of good tidings and was bringing from the field of battle news of something such as they had prayed for.

when Chūsis arrived and, with an obeisance, announced the victory, David questioned him about his son. "May your enemies," he replied, "suffer the same fate as Absalom." These words took away from both him and his soldiers all their joy over the victory, great as that was. As for David, he went David's up to the highest part of the city a and bewailed his lament for Absalom. son, beating his breast, tearing his hair and doing 2 Sam. himself every kind of injury, b and crying out "O my (Heb. xix. son, would that death had come to me and that I had 1.) died with you!"c for he was by nature affectionate, and was especially attached to Absalom. And, when the army and Joab heard how deeply the king mourned for his son, they were ashamed to enter the city with the appearance of victors, and, instead, they all came in, as if from a defeat, with bowed heads and tearful faces. Then, while the king with Joab comveiled head was moaning for his son, Joab went into pels David him and consoled him, saying, "My lord, you are mourning.

And yet you are not ashamed to behave in this way about a man who is the more hateful for having been so impious, though your own son. Cease, therefore, from your unjustified grief and go out and show yourself to your soldiers and thank them for the victory and for their ardour in the fight. For, if you persist in doing as you have just been doing, I will this very day persuade the people to revolt from you and give the kingdom over to another, and then I shall make your sorrow more bitter and real." a By these words Joab diverted the king from his grief, and brought him to taking thought about the matter. So David, changing his appearance, b made himself presentable to the people, and sat by the gates, until all the people heard of it and ran to greet him. And this was how these matters were.

direction of affairs just as before. Such were the reports that were continually brought to David. but he none the less sent a message to the high priests Sadok and Abiathar that they should tell the chiefs of the tribe of Judah what a disgrace it was for them that the other tribes had chosen David king before they did, "especially," they were to add, "as you are his kin and have common blood with him." And he instructed them to speak to Amasa, the commander, in the same vein and ask why. although he was a son of David's sister, he had not persuaded the people to restore the kingdom to David; and they were to say that he might expect not only a reconciliation with him, -which had already taken place-but also the chief command of the entire people, like that which Absalom had given him. So the high priests gave the one message to the chiefs of the tribe (of Judah), and the other message of the king they gave to Amasa, whom they persuaded to undertake measures on his behalf. He. in turn, persuaded the tribe immediately to send envoys to David, inviting him to return to his own kingdom.c And all the Israelites, at the suggestion of Amasa, did the same thing.

(2) After the envoys came to him, David went on The tribes to Jerusalem. And first of all the tribes to meet the assemble at the Jordan king at the river Jordan was Judah; also Samūis, the to welcome son of Gera, with a thousand men whom he had 2 Sam xix. brought from the tribe of Benjamin, and Siba, the 15 (16).

b In Scripture David does not mention the exact relation, but merely says "art thou not of my bone (Targum "my kinsman ") and flesh?"

The reconciliation with Amasa and the latter's action in persuading the Israelites to send envoys are unscriptural details.

freedman of Saul, and his sons, who were fifteen in number, together with twenty servants. These latter with the tribe of Judah made a bridge a over the river, in order that the king and his men might cross the more easily. And, when he came to the Jordan, David he was welcomed by the tribe of Judah; then, as he forgives Shimei. mounted the bridge, b Samuis fell down before him 2 Sam. xix. and clasped his feet, asking pardon for the wrongs 18 (19). he had done him, and that he should not be harsh with him nor let his first thought, on coming into power, be one of vengeance; he should, Samuis said, take into account that he had repented of his errors and had hastened to be the first to come to him. While he thus made supplication and begged for mercy, Abisai, the brother of Joab, said to him, "Shall you, then, not die for having cursed the one appointed by God to reign?" But David turned to him and said, "Will you not be quiet, sons of Saruia? Do not stir up for us new disorders and dissensions to follow the first. You must not fail to realize that with to-day I begin my reign. I have, therefore, sworn to forgo punishment for acts of rebellion, and not to prosecute any offender. And you, Samūis," he said, "take courage and have no fear that you will be put to death." The other then did obeisance to him and went on before him.

this unhappy state on the king's fall from power. He had, moreover, been unjustly accused before David by his steward Siba. And so, when he greeted David and did obeisance to him, the latter inquired just why he had not gone out with him and shared his exile, whereupon he replied that this was Siba's fault, for, although he had been ordered to prepare for the departure, he had paid no attention, but had disregarded him quite as if he had been a mere slave. " If, indeed," he added, "I had sound feet and had been able to use them in flight, I should not have been far behind you. But this is not the only way, my lord, in which he has wrongfully hindered my obedience to you, for he has also slandered me and has maliciously lied about me. I know very well, however, that none of these calumnies finds admittance into your mind, for it is just and loves the truth, which the Deity also wishes to prevail a; and, though you were exposed to great hardships at the hands of my grandfather, on which account our whole family was deserving of extinction, you were, none the less, forbearing and kind in making yourself forget all these things at the very time when you might have remembered them and also had the power to take vengeance.b But you considered me your friend and had me daily at your table, and in no way was I less well treated than the most honoured of your relatives." After this speech of his, David decided neither to punish Memphibosthos nor to condemn Siba for having made false charges, but he told Memphibosthos that, because he had not come to him with Siba, he had presented all his substance to the latter; however,

(5) Then there came to him at Galgala the leading Bivalry men of every tribe a with a great multitude, and they Israel and reproached the tribe of Judah for having come to Judah for David's him secretly, saying that they should all have met favour. him together at one time. But the chiefs of the 2 Sam. xix. tribe of Judah begged them not to be annoyed at having been anticipated, for, they said, they were David's relatives and, being for that reason more thoughtful for him and fonder of him, they had come there first; but they had not indeed, by coming first, received any gifts of which the others, who came to him later, could have reason to complain. The chiefs of the other tribes were not silenced by these words of the leaders of the tribe of Judah, but said, "We are amazed, brothers, that you call the king a relative only of vourselves, for he who receives from God authority over all must be considered a relative of us And for this reason the entire people has eleven b parts (in him), while you have but one, and we are older c; and so you have not done right in coming to the king in secrecy and by stealth."

(6) While the leaders were thus arguing with each Sheba other, there stood up among them a certain man of (Sabsios) evil character and a lover of dissension, named Israelites Sabaios, the son of Bochorios, of the tribe of Ben-pavid. jamin, who addressed the multitude in a loud voice, 2 Sam. xx.1 saying," None of us has any portion of David or any lot with the son of Jesse." And with these words he blew his horn and declared war on the king, and they all deserted David to follow him; only the tribe of Judah stood by him, and brought him back to his palace in Jerusalem. And the concubines, with whom his son Absalom had lain, he transferred to another dwelling, instructing their attendants to provide them with all things necessary, but he himself never again came near them. Then he ap-David pointed Amasa commander, giving him the office appoints which Joab had held, and ordered him to collect as commander large an army as possible from the tribe of Judah 2 Sam. xx. 4 and to come to him after three days, in order that he might give the entire force over to him and send him out to make war on the son of Bochorios. So Amasa went out, but he was slow in assembling an army, and, as he did not return on the third day, the king said to Joab b that it was not a good thing to grant Sabaios a breathing-space, lest he prepare a greater force and cause them more harm and trouble than Absalom had done. "Do not, therefore, wait for anyone, but take the force now here and the six hundred men o and, with your brother Abisai, pursue the enemy. And wherever you may come upon them, try to engage them. And now hasten to prevent them from seizing fortified cities and so causing us great exertion and sweat."

taking with him his brother and the six hundred men Joab and ordering the rest of the force in Jerusalem to Sheba, and follow, he set out to attack Sabaios. But when he slays Amasa reached Gabaon,—this is a village forty stades distant 2 Sam. xx. 7. from Jerusalem a—he found Amasa there at the head of a large force, and Joab went to meet him with his sword girded on and wearing a breastplate. Then. as Amasa approached to greet him, he artfully contrived to have his sword fall, as if by itself, out of its sheath.b And he picked it up from the ground, and with his other hand seized Amasa, who was now near him, by the beard as if to kiss him, and with an unforeseen thrust in the belly killed him. This impious Reflections and most unholy deed he committed against a brave on Joab's conduct. youth, who was, moreover, his relative, and had done him no wrong, because he envied him his office of commander and his being honoured by the king with a rank equal to his own. It was for this same reason that he had murdered Abenner also, except that the former crime seemed to have a decent pretext to make it pardonable, that is, when considered as an act of vengeance for his brother Asael; but for the murder of Amasa he had no such excuse. And, when he had killed his fellow-commander, he started in pursuit of Sabaios, leaving behind one man with the corpse, whom he instructed to call out to the army that Amasa had been justly put to death and punished deservedly, and to say, " If you are for the king, follow his commander Joab and his brother Abisai." ward to wonder at it and pity it, until the guard lifted it up and carried it away from there to a place far from the road, where he laid it down and covered it with a cloak. After this was done, all the people followed Joab. And, after he had pursued Sabaios Joab through the entire Israelite country, someone in-besieges Sheba in formed him that he was in a fortified city called Abel Beth. Abelochea. So he went there, and invested the city (Abelochea) with his army, and set up a palisade c around it; then 2 Sam. he ordered his soldiers to undermine the walls and overthrow them, d for, as those within the city refused to admit him, he felt very bitter toward them.

and Targum translate Heb. mashhithim) to throw the wall down." Josephus evidently takes mashhithim (a ptc. masc. pl.) as a denominative verb from the root shahath "pit," hence his rendering "undermine," a meaning proposed in modern times by Ewald. The usual meaning of the verbal root is "destroy" (A.V. here has "battered").

The corrupt and therefore obscure Heb. of 2 Sam. xx. 18, 19a reads lit., "And she spoke, saying, 'In former times they would ask of Abel and so they concluded. I—the peaceful (?) and faithful of Israel, etc." Josephus's interpretation seems to be based in part on the Targum, which renders, "And she spoke, saying, 'Let me mention what is written in the Book of the Law, that one should first ask of a city; thus you should have asked Abel whether it wished to make peace. We are making peace with Israel in good faith, etc."

a "To be gracious to him" is derived from LXX ίλεώς μοι (sc. ὁ θεός), a free translation of Heb. hāl'llāh ll " far be it from me."

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, VII. 290-294

Thereupon he prayed that God might continue to be gracious to him, a and said that for his part he had no wish to slay any of its people, much less destroy so great a city; furthermore, if he could get them to deliver up for punishment Sabaios, the son of Bochorios, who had rebelled against the king, he would give up the siege and withdraw his army. When the woman heard Joab's words, she asked him to wait a little while, and his enemy's head would very soon be thrown to him; then she went down to the inhabitants of the city and cried, "Do you wish to perish most miserably with your children and wives for the sake of a worthless fellow whom no one even knows, or have him for a king in place of David, who has been your b benefactor in so many ways, and set yourselves up, as a single city, against so great and so mighty a power?" And so she persuaded them to cut off Sabaios's head and throw it to Joab's army. When this was done, the king's commander sounded the retreat and raised the siege. Then he came to Jerusalem and was again appointed commander of all the people. The king also put Banaias over the bodyguard and the six hundred, and gave Adoramos d charge of the tribute, and Josaphat, the son of Achilos, the records, and designated Sūsa f as scribe, and Sadok and Abiathar as priests.

Then the prophets a slain by declared that God wished the Gabaonites to be 2 Sam. avenged, whom King Saul had wickedly killed and xxi. 1. with whom he had dealt treacherously, in violation of the oaths which the commander Joshua and the elders had sworn to them. b If, then, he would permit the Gabaonites to exact such satisfaction as they might desire for those who had been slain, God would, He promised, be reconciled to them and would free the multitude from its affliction. Accordingly, after learning from the prophets that this was God's desire, he sent for the Gabaonites and inquired what satisfaction they wanted. And, when they asked that seven sons a of Saul's family be given up to them for punishment, the king had a search made for them and surrendered them to the Gabaonites, but he spared Jebosthos. the son of Jonathan. Then the Gabaonites took them and punished them as they saw fit. And God at once began to send rain and to restore the land to its fruitfulness, by delivering it from drought. ^a Bibl. Ishbi-benob, xxx' Ieσβl. The Heb. consonantal text, meaning "they dwelled in Nob," is corrupt and conceals a proper name rather different from Ishbi-benob. Weill rightly supposes that Josephus's Akmōn represents Heb. Hakmôn, but, like others, has failed to see that it is identical with Jashobeam the Hachmonite, 1 Chron. xi. 11 (cf. § 308 note). The latter is, to be sure, one of David's warriors, and not his enemy, as here, but whether Scripture or Josephus is responsible for this confusion, there can be no doubt of this identity of names. It may also be noted that rabbinic tradition makes Ishbi a brother of Goliath and describes at length 518

He had a spear, the haft of which was said to weigh three hundred shekels, a breastplate of chainmail, o and a sword, and he turned about and rushed forward with the intention of killing the enemy's king, who was exhausted by his exertions. But suddenly there appeared Abisai, the brother of Joab, who protected the king by standing astride over him as he lay there, and killed his enemy. But the people were distressed by the king's narrow escape from death, and the leaders made him swear that he would never again go out with them to battle, lest, through his bravery and zeal, he should suffer some injury and so deprive the people of the benefits he brought them, both those that he had already conferred, and those that they might still enjoy if he lived for a long time.

were performed and great glory was won by Sabre-2 Sam. chēs a the Hittite, one of David's bravest men, for i chron. he killed many of those who boasted of having the xx. 4. Giants for ancestors, and thought much of their own courage; and so he was responsible for the victory of the Hebrews. After this defeat the Philistines made war a second time, and David sent an army against them, of whom the most valiant was his relative Ephan, d for, in single combat with the bravest of all the Philistines, he killed him and put the rest to flight, many of them being slain in battle. But after a brief interval of time they encamped near Gitta, a city not far from the border of the Hebrews' country, and there was among them a man six cubits 9 in height, who had, on both of his feet and hands, one more toe and finger than nature usually provides. Now, of the army sent against them by David, Jonathan, the son of Sama, h fought against this man in single combat, and by slaying him, turned the battle a brother of Goliath, and the epithet Beth ha-lahmi "Bethlehemite" applied to Elhanan in 2 Sam. is converted to a personal name Lahmi, giving the reading, 1 Chron. xx. 5, "And Elhanan the son of Jair slew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite." Josephus evades the difficulty more simply by omitting the name of Goliath.

σ Unscriptural detail. In 2 Sam. Heb. has ish mādôn
"man of strife," Lxx ἀνηρ Μαδών; in 1 Chron. ish middah
"man of stature," Lxx ἀνηρ ὑπερμεγέθης. Possibly Josephus was careless in taking "six," occurring twice in Scripture of the giant's fingers and toes, to apply to his height.
It is unlikely that, as Weill suggests, he was thinking of Goliath's height, "six cubits and a span," 1 Sam. xvii. 4, for he follows the Lxx in reading "four cubits and a span" in that passage (A. vi. 171).

If he was at Adullam, his men need not have run through the enemy's camp to get to Bethlehem, whereas his being at Jerusalem makes the incident understandable. The valley of Rephaim lay south of Jerusalem on the way to Bethlehem.

soon as they heard this, the three men immediately ran out and dashed through the midst of the enemy's camp, until they came to Bethlehem, and, when they had drawn the water, came back again through the enemy's camp to the king; so amazed were the Philistines at their audacity and courage, that they remained motionless and did not venture to attack them, although they were contemptuous of their fewness. But, when the water was brought to him, the king did not drink it, saying that it had been brought at the risk of men's lives and that therefore it would not be right for him to drink it; then he poured some of it out as a libation to God, and gave Him thanks for the safety of his men. ^a These reflections of David are an amplification of Scripture, which says merely, "And David said unto God, I am in a great strait; let me fall now into the hand of the Lord, for very great are his mercies, but let me not fall into the hand of man." Similar to Josephus's expansion are the explanations given in rabbinic tradition, of. Ginzberg, iv. 112.

such an affliction as is common to kings and subjects alike, and one in which all have equal reason for fear, —first saving that it was much better to fall into the hands of God than into those of the enemy.a

(3) When the prophet heard this answer, he re-Description ported it to God, who thereupon sent pestilence and of the plague. destruction upon the Hebrews. And they did not all die in the same manner so that the disease could be easily recognized, but, while there was only one (source of) evil, it carried them off for innumerable real or apparent causes, which they could not distinguish. One after the other, they perished, and the dread sickness, coming on them unperceived, brought swift death; some, in the midst of terrible suffering and acute pain, suddenly breathed their last; some were so wasted by their malady that there was nothing of them left for burial, and, in the course of their illness itself, they were completely consumed; others, with sudden darkness falling on their eyes, were suffocated as they groaned; still others died in the act of burying one of their household, and the interment was left unfinished. And, in the de-2 Sam. structive pestilence, which lasted from early morning 1 chron. until the hour of the noon meal, there perished xxi. 14. seventy thousand souls. Now the angel stretched out his hand against Jerusalem also and sent the plague upon it as well. And the king put on sackthe Lord sent pestilence upon Israel," is probably an imitation of the famous description of the plague in Thucydides ii. 47 ff., which also furnished the model for similar passages in later books of the Antiquities.

So IXX in 2 Sam. (1 Chron. omits); Heb. "unto the time appointed $(m\delta'ed)$," Targum "unto the time of burning (the burnt-offering)"; rabbinic tradition, like the IXX, takes the Heb. "time appointed" to mean "midday," as if mo'ed here meant "the time appointed for the day's greatest heat."

^e The word "shepherd" is found in the Targum and some LXX MSS, in 2 Sam.; Heb. "I have sinned and I have done wickedly, but these sheep, what have they done?"

According to 2 Sam. xxiv. 16 (1 Chron. xxi. 15) God caused the angel of pestilence to stay his hand as he stood by Araunah's threshing-floor, before David pleaded that the people be spared, while in verses 21-25 (1 Chron. verses 22-27) we read that the plague did not cease until the altar had been built. Josephus ignores this inconsistency here and in § 332.

Then, looking up into the air and beholding the angel being borne through it toward Jerusalem, with his sword drawn, the king said to God that it was he, the shepherd a who was rightly to be punished, but the flock, which had committed no sin, should be saved a; and he entreated Him to cause His anger to fall upon him and all his line, but to spare the people.

When Jebusite. David heard these commands he did not neglect xxiv.18: them, but immediately hastened to the place indi-1 Chron. xxi. 18. cated to him. Now Oronnas was threshing his grain and, when he saw the king approaching with all his servants, he ran to him and did obeisance; he was, to be sure, of Jebusite descent, but he was one of David's best friends, and for this reason, the latter did him no harm when he overthrew the city, as we related a little while ago. Thereupon he replied that he would present the threshing-floor, as well as the plough a and oxen, as a burnt-offering, and prayed that God would graciously accept the sacrifice. The king then said that he admired him for his liberality and greatness of soul, and accepted his kind gifts, but requested him to take payment for them all, for it was not right for anyone to offer a sacrifice that cost him nothing. And when Oronnas said he might do as he pleased, David buys he bought the threshing-floor from him for fifty Arauna's threshingshekels, b and, having built the altar, he consecrated floor as a it c and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. temple. By these means the Deity was appeased and once 2 Sam. xxiv. 24; more became gracious. As it happened, it was to 1 Chron. this very place that Abraham brought his son Isaac, xxi. 25. to sacrifice him as a burnt-offering, and, as he was about to slaughter him, there suddenly appeared beside the altar a ram, which Abraham sacrificed in place of his son, as we related earlier.d Then, when David saw that God had hearkened to his prayer and had accepted the sacrifice with favour, he resolved to call that entire place the altar of all the people, and to build a temple to God; and, in uttering this

This last detail ("and, in uttering this word," etc.) was suggested by the lxx addition to 2 Sam. xxiv. 25 καὶ προσθθηκεν Σαλωμών έπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον έπὶ ἐσχάτω ὅτι μικρὸν ἡν ἐν πρώτοις "and Solomon added to the altar at a later time because it was small at first."

He also collected a great ii. 2, 17; quantity of iron and bronze for the work, and many 1 Chron. cedar-trees of very great size, sent to him by the Tyrians and Sidonians, from whom he had ordered a supply of the wood. And he told his friends that he was preparing these things now, in order that he might leave the materials for the building of the temple ready for the son who was destined to reign after him, who would thus not have to procure them when he would still be a youth and inexperienced because of his age, but would have them at hand to complete the work.

Josephus's figure of 180,000 mistakenly includes a levy of 30,000 Israelites (therefore not aliens), and omits the 3600 overseers, whom he counts separately, cf. following note.

also foretold that his youngest a son Solomon would build Him a temple, and should be called by this name, and promised to watch over him like a father, and bring prosperity to the country of the Hebrews in his reign, with, among other things, the greatest of all blessings, namely peace and freedom from war and civil dissension. "Therefore," he said, "since, even before your birth, you were chosen by God to be king, endeavour to be worthy of His providence by being pious, just and brave; keep the commandments and the laws which He gave us through Moses, and do not permit others to transgress them; as for the temple which He has decreed shall be made for Him in your reign, take pains to complete b it for God, and do not be dismayed at the magnitude of the labour, nor shrink from it, for I shall make everything ready for you before my death. You should, indeed, know that ten thousand c talents of gold and one hundred thousand d talents of silver have already been collected, and that I have brought together more bronze and iron than can be reckoned, and a limitless quantity of wood and stone. You also have many tens of thousands of stone-cutters and carpenters, and whatever else is needed you yourself will add. Be, then, most brave, for you have God as your protector." He further exhorted the chiefs of the people to assist his son in the building, and, named Adonias, a had thoughts similar to those of Absalom and, aspiring to be king himself, told his friends that he ought to succeed to the royal power. So he provided himself with many chariots and horses and fifty men to run before him. When his father saw this, he did not rebuke him nor restrain him from his purpose, nor even go so far as to ask him why he did these things. And Adonias had as accomplices the commander Joab and the high priest Abiathar; the only ones opposed to him were the high priest Sadok. the prophet Nathan, Banaias, the chief of the bodyguards, David's friend Simūeis b and all the foremost warriors. And Adonias prepared a dinner outside the city beside the spring in the royal garden, and invited all his brothers except Solomon; he also brought with him the commander Joab and Abiathar and the chiefs of the tribe of Judah, but he did not invite to the feast either the high priest Sadok d or the prophet Nathan or Banaias, the chief of the bodyguard, or any of the opposing party. These things Nathan the prophet Nathan reported to Solomon's mother advises whether this was done with your approval." When Nathan had thus spoken, the king ordered Bersabē to be summoned to him,—for she had hurried from the room when the prophet arrived a-and, when his wife came, he said, "I swear to you by Almighty God that your son Solomon shall assuredly be king, as I have sworn before, and he shall sit upon my throne; and it shall be this very day." Thereupon she did obeisance to him and wished him long life. The king then sent for Sadok, the high priest, and David Banaias, the chief of the bodyguard, and, when they orders Zadok and came, he ordered them to take with them the prophet Nathan to Nathan and the soldiers about the court, and, after solomon. mounting his son Solomon upon the royal mule, to 1 Kingsi. 32, lead him outside the city to the spring called Geion, anoint him with the holy oil, and proclaim him king. This he commanded the high priest Sadok and the prophet Nathan to do. And he ordered them to accompany him through the midst of the city, blowing horns and shouting, "May King Solomon sit upon the royal throne for ever!" in order that all the people might know that he had been declared a These instructions are an amplification of 1 Kings i. 35. The infinitive ἐντετάλθαι is here to be taken, as elsewhere in Josephus, as a finite verb, the indirect discourse after προσ-έταξε " ordered" being carelessly continued, cf. ixx ἐγω ἐνετειλάμην (Luc. αὐτῷ ἐντειλοῦμαι) τοῦ εἶναι εἰς ἡγούμενον ἐπὶ Ἰσραἡλ καὶ Ἰουδά; Heb. "I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and Judah." Weill, taking ἐντετάλθαι as a continuation of David's order to Zadok and Nathan, understands it to mean that they were to give the instructions about the kingdom to Solomon; he remarks "this last 552 of King David, Adonias and all the guests sprang up from the banquet table and fled, each to his own home. And Adonias, being afraid of the king because of what he had done, became a suppliant to God and grasped the horns of the altar,—that is, its projections; and this act of his was reported to Solomon, and also that he had asked to have a pledge from him that he would bear him no malice and do him no harm. Solomon with great mildness and moderation let him off this time without punishment for his offence, but said that if he were ever again caught in an attempt at revolution, he would have himself to blame for his punishment; then he sent men to remove him from his place of sanctuary, and, when he came before him and did obeisance, Solomon ordered him to go back to his own house without any fear, and requested him to conduct himself well in future, as this would be to his own advantage.

There is, however, no reason to suspect the present text, cf. 1 Chron. xxii. 9 where the Heb. plays upon the resemblance of Solomon's name (Shelômôh) to shālôm "peace"—a word-play that could not be conveyed to Josephus's Greek readers.

^a Scripture merely says that, after Nathan's speech, David summoned Bath-sheba, and does not indicate at precisely what moment she had left his presence. Her leaving upon Nathan's entrance was probably in accord with oriental etiquette. One medieval Jewish commentator explains that Bath-sheba had left in order to avoid any appearance of collusion with Nathan.

before. a He then divided them into families, and, 1 Chron. after separating the priests from the rest of the xxiv. 8. tribe. b he found that of these there were twenty-four families, sixteen of the house of Eleazar and eight of the house of Ithamar; he further arranged that one family should minister to God each week from Sabbath to Sabbath.^d Now this is the way in which all the families drew lots in the presence of David and the high priests Sadok and Abiathar and all the chiefs: the family which came out first in the drawing was inscribed as the first to serve, and the second similarly, and so with all twenty-four. And this apportionment has lasted down to this day. He also divided the tribe of Levites into twenty-four parts, and, according to the order in which the lots were drawn, they were chosen for a week, in the same manner as the priestly courses. And he honoured 1 Chron. the descendants of Moses by making them keepers of the treasury of God and of such offerings as the kings had made. He also ordained that all those of the tribe of Levites and the priests should serve God night and day, as Moses had enjoined them.

(8) After this, he divided the army into twelve Regulation divisions with their leaders, captains of hundreds of the army and and lower officers, each division having twenty-four treasury-thousand men, whom he ordered to be in attendance xvii. 1. on Solomon for thirty days at a time, from the first day of the month until the last, together with their priestly classes (Schürer suspects a corruption of 24 to 4); in Vita 2 he mentions only the 24 courses (ἐφημερίδες), as here.

sessed of every virtue which should be found in a His king entrusted with the safety of so many nations; a character. there was no one like him for bravery, and, in the contests fought on behalf of his subjects, he was the first to rush into danger, encouraging his soldiers against the opposing lines by his labours in the fight, and not by commanding them like a master. He was also most apt in perceiving and understanding the course of future events and in dealing with the immediate situation, prudent, mild, kind to those in trouble, just and humane,—qualities which only the greatest kings are expected to have; and, with so great a measure of authority, never once did he do wrong, except in the matter of Uriah's wife. Moreover he left behind such wealth as no other king, whether of the Hebrews or other nations, ever did.

(3) Then his son Solomon interred him in Jeru-David's salem with all the splendour customary at royal burial. I Kings funerals, and also buried with him a great abundance ii. 10. of wealth, the vastness of which one may easily gather from what is now to be related: after a period of Later thirteen hundred years, b when Hyrcanus, the high David's priest, was besieged by Antiochus, surnamed the tomb.

^a The text (from "He was a most excellent man") is probably corrupt. The variant reads "In addition to his having been so excellent a man, possessed of every virtue and entrusted with the safety of so many nations, one must praise him for the vigour of his (bodily) strength and his prudence and intelligence."

^b The siege of Jerusalem, here referred to, took place in 135/134 B.C. Josephus thus places David's death in 1435 B.C., which is almost 500 years earlier than the generally accepted date (c. 970 B.C.).

Pious (Eusebēs),² the son of Demetrius, he wished to give the latter money to raise the siege and withdraw his army, and, as he had no other resource, he opened one of the chambers in David's tomb and carried off three thousand talents, part of which he gave to Antiochus and so put an end to the siege, as we have elsewhere related.⁵ And again, after an interval of many years, King Herod opened another chamber and took away a large sum of money.⁶ Neither of them, however, came upon the coffins of the kings, for these had been artfully buried under the earth so that they could not be seen by anyone entering the tomb. But concerning these matters let it suffice us to have related this much.

of Pious is said to have been given him because of his "extraordinary piety." These surnames, Soter and Eusebes, applied to Antiochus Sidetes by Josephus, are not found elsewhere in ancient sources.

And Bersabē promised to intercede for him zealously and to bring the marriage about, both because the king would wish to do him a favour and because she would earnestly entreat him.c And so he departed with high hopes of the marriage, while Solomon's mother straightway hastened to her son to tell him of the promise she had made Adonias upon his request. And her son came forward to meet her and embraced her, and when he had led her to the chamber where, at that time, his royal throne was, and had taken his seat upon it, he ordered another throne to be placed for his mother at his right hand. When Bersabe was seated she said, "I have, my son, one favour to ask; grant me this and do not act disagreeably or angrily by denying it." And, as Solomon bade her command him, for, he said, it is a sacred duty to do everything for a mother, and added a word of reproach for the way she had begun, in that she had not spoken with a sure hope of obtaining what she requested but had been fearful of being denied,d she asked him to give the virgin Abisake to his brother Adonias in marriage.

Adonias, to yield up the kingdom also to him, on the 1 Kings ground that he was his elder brother and had powerful friends in Joab the commander and Abiathar the priest. Then, having sent for Banaias, who was in charge of the bodyguard, he ordered him to kill his brother Adonias. And he called Abiathar the priest and said, "You owe your life to the hardships you Abiathar is shared with my father and to the ark which you deposed brought over with him; but I impose the following high priestpunishment upon you for having gone over to 1 Kings Adonias's side and sympathized with him: you shall ii. 27. not remain here nor ever come into my presence, but go to your native place a and live in the fields and continue so to live until your death, for you have sinned too greatly to remain justly in office any longer." son of Maraiothos, Achitoba the son of Arophaios, and Sadok the son of Achitob, who was the first to become high priest in the reign of David.

(4) Now when Joab the commander heard that Joab is also Adonias had been put to death, he was greatly executed by Bensiah. afraid, for he was more friendly to him than to King I Kings Solomon, b and, as he not unreasonably expected that ii. 28. danger threatened him because of his goodwill to Adonias, he fled for refuge to the altar, where he imagined he would secure safety for himself because of the king's piety toward God. But when the king was told of Joab's plan, he sent Banaias with orders to remove him c and bring him to the judgement-hall to make his defence.d Joab, however, said that he would not leave the temple but would die there rather than in any other place. When Banaias reported his answer to the king, Solomon ordered his head to be cut off there, as Joab wished it.—this being the penalty exacted for the two generals whom he had impiously slain—and his body to be buried, in order that his sins might never leave his family (in peace), while Solomon himself and his father should be blameless for Joab's death. And so Banaias. after having carried out these orders, was himself appointed commander of the entire army, and the king made Sadok sole high priest in place of Abiathar, whom he had removed.

e According to Scripture, Solomon, while explicitly holding his father and himself guiltless of the blood of those whom Joab had slain, only implies that he is also blameless for Joab's death, I Kings ii. 32, "And the Lord shall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men," etc.

To the severity ii. 36. of this threat he added the obligation of taking an oath. So Sūmūisos, saying that he was pleased with Solomon's commands, and also swearing to observe them, left his native place and made his home in Jerusalem. But after three years had passed, upon hearing that two of his slaves who had escaped from him were in Gitta.d he set out after the men. And when he returned with them, the king heard of it and, holding that he had made light of his commands and-what was worse-had shown no regard for the oaths sworn to God, he was angered and having called him, said, "Did you not swear not to leave me nor ever go out from this city to another? You shall not, therefore, escape the penalty for your perjury, but I shall punish you as a miscreant both for this crime and for your insolence to my father at the time of his flight, in order that you may know that evildoers gain nothing by not being punished at the time of their crimes, but during the whole time in which they think themselves secure because they have suffered nothing, their punishment increases and becomes more severe than that which they would have paid at

And he decided to go to 2 Chron. Gibron c and sacrifice to God upon the bronze altar i. 3, 5. built by Moses, and he offered whole burnt-offerings of a thousand victims. third day this woman by sleeping on her child caused its death, and she took my child from my lap and carried it over to her side and then laid the dead child in my arms as I slept. And in the morning when I wished to give the breast to the child, I did not find my son but I saw this woman's dead child lying beside me, for I looked at it carefully and recognized whose it was. I therefore demanded my son back, and, as I have not obtained him, I have come to appeal to you, my lord, for help; for, contemptuously relying on the fact that we were alone and that she has no one to fear who can convict her, she stubbornly persists in her denial." After she had spoken the king asked the other woman what she had to say in contradiction to these statements. And she denied having done this thing, saying that it was her child that was alive, while her adversary's was the dead one. And when no one could see what judge-solomon as ment to give, but all were mentally blinded, as by a sagacious judge disriddle, in finding a solution, the king alone devised covers the the following plan: a he ordered both the dead and 1 Kings the living child to be brought, and then sent for one iii. 24. of the bodyguard and ordered him to draw his sword and cut both children in half, in order that either woman might take half of the dead child and half of the living child.^b Thereupon all the people secretly made fun of the king as of a boy.c But meanwhile the woman who had demanded the child and was its true mother cried out that they should not do this but should give the child over to the other woman as if and the dead child were to be divided; the Heb. and LXX mention only the division of the living child. Perhaps the Luc. addition is, as Weill suggests, a reminiscence of the procedure followed in another case, cf. Ex. xxi. 35. Unscriptural detail.

it were hers, for she would be content to have it alive and only look at it, even if it should seem to be another's, while the other woman was prepared to see it divided and even asked that she herself a be put to torture. Thereupon the king, recognizing that the words of either were prompted by her true sentiments, adjudged the child to the one who cried out, holding that she was really its mother, and condemned the other for her wickedness both in having killed her own son and in being anxious to see her friend's child destroyed. And one more was appointed as ruler over these. Now a wonderful increase was obtained by the people of the Hebrews and the tribe of Judah when they turned to husbandry and the cultivation of the soil, for, as they enjoyed peace and were undistracted by wars and disturbances and also enjoyed to the fullest most desirable freedom, they devoted themselves, each one to increasing his holdings and making them more valuable.

Here too Scripture gives the number of parables, not the number of books of parables.

put to the nose of the possessed man a ring which had under its seal one of the roots a prescribed by Solomon, and then, as the man smelled it, drew out the demon through his nostrils, and, when the man at once fell down, adjured the demon never to come back into him, speaking Solomon's name and reciting the incantations which he had composed. Then, wishing to convince the bystanders and prove to them that he had this power, Eleazar placed a cup or footbasin full of water a little way off and commanded the demon, as it went out of the man, to overturn it and make known to the spectators that he had left the man. And when this was done, the understanding and wisdom of Solomon were clearly revealed, on account of which we have been induced to speak of these things, in order that all men may know the greatness of his nature and how God favoured him, and that no one under the sun may be ignorant of the king's surpassing virtue of every kind.

my readers to know that we have said nothing more than what is true, and have not, by inserting into the history various plausible and seductive passages meant to deceive and entertain, attempted to evade critical inquiry, asking to be instantly believed; nor should we be indulgently held blameless if we depart from what is proper to a historical narrative; on the contrary, we ask that no hearing be given us unless we are able to establish the truth with demonstra-

(9) Now King Solomon, on receiving the letter Solomon's from the king of the Tyrians, commended his zeal and gitts to goodwill, and gave him in return the supplies he had ¹ Kings v. 11 requested, sending him yearly twenty thousand kors ^a (Heb. v. 25). of grain and as many b baths of oil—the bath containing seventy-two sextarii (xestai).c He also furnished the same measure of wine. And so the friendship of Eiromos and Solomon increased through these things, and they swore that it should continue for ever. And the king imposed on all the people a Division of levy of thirty thousand workmen, whose labour he the labour. made less difficult by dividing it wisely among them, (Heb. v. 27). for he had ten thousand cut timber for a month on Mount Lebanon and then return to their homes and rest for two months until the other twenty thousand had finished their work in the appointed time. Thus it would then be the turn of the first ten thousand to return to their work in the fourth month.

The bath was equivalent to about 36 litres or 9 gallons; it contained 72 logs, which are thus equated by Josephus with sextarii.

^e In A. ii. 318 (= Ex. xii. 40) Josephus dates Abraham's coming to Canaan 430 years before the exodus, i.e. 1022 years before the building of the temple.

f According to this reckoning, 420 years (1440–1020) elapsed between the deluge and Abraham's coming to Canaan, but in Ant. i. 148 ff. the interval is to be reckoned as 1067 years.

"According to Ant. i. 82 the deluge came 2262 years after Adam's creation; if to this we add 1440 years, given above as the interval between the deluge and the building of the temple, we get 3702 instead of 3102 years between Adam's creation and the building of the temple. For an explanation of these chronological discrepancies cf. Ant. i. 82 note.

^a Scripture does not state how many chambers there were. This number may be derived from the description of Ezekiel's temple, Ezek. xl. 17, or, as Weill thinks, may have been reckoned by Josephus on the basis of the length of three sides of the temple (140 cubits), divided by the width of each chamber (5 cubits); this gives 28 chambers, and with the addition of 2 chambers at the corners 30 chambers altogether.

height of a hundred and twenty cubits. And all The sidearound the temple he built thirty a small chambers thambers. 1 Kings vi. 5 which, surrounding it on the outside, were to hold it (LXX vi. 10) together by their compactness and number. He also made entrances in them, leading from one to the other.b Each of these chambers was five cubits in breadth, the same in length, and twenty cubits in height. And above these were built other chambers and again still others above them, equal in proportion and number, d so that they reached a combined height equivalent to that of the lower building, the upper story not having chambers built around it. And a roof of cedar was put over the edifice. But the chambers each had a separate roof not joined to the next, while the rest of the building had a common roof constructed of very long beams crossing one another and reaching all sides, so that the middle walls, being held together by the same pieces of timber, were thereby made stronger. And under the beams he laid a ceiling of the same material, which was all smoothly divided into panels and overlaid with gold. The walls he covered at intervals with cedar boards, which he embossed with gold, so that the Josephus apparently divides 60 cubits, the height of the temple, by 3 (the number of stories of chambers).

d Josephus omits to state that these rows of side chambers projected from the temple wall in step fashion, each story extending one cubit beyond the story below, cf. 1 Kings vi. 5.

e The text is difficult; in part it seems to refer to brackets running diagonally from the horizontal ceiling timbers to the vertical timbers of the walls. Josephus apparently takes Heb. yaşıa (A.V. "chambers") in I Kings vi. 10 in the sense of "bracing timbers," cf. Lxx ἐνδέσμους "bondings."

Which middle walls are meant is far from clear. sibly Josephus means the walls as they were before being covered with cedar and gold.

As for the cherubim themselves, no one can say or imagine what they looked like.c And he also paved the floor of the temple with plates of gold, and to the gate of the temple set doors in proportion to the height of the walls, in breadth twenty cubits, d and these he inlaid with gold. a Bibl. "his father was a man of Tyre"; Josephus's "Urias" is generally explained as a corruption of the LXX Túριos; possibly it is due to confusion with Uri, LXX Οὐρείας, the father of Bezaleel the artificer of the bronze altar mentioned in 2 Chron. ii. 5, cf. § 22 note.

b Josephus is evidently harmonizing the contradiction between this passage in 2 Kings and 2 Chron. ii. 14, where Hiram's mother is said to be "of the daughters of Dan," by making Hiram's father an Israelite, presumably a Danite; while rabbinic tradition assumes that Hiram was a Naphthalite

These also were east in metal, and had hubs and rims a cubit and a half in diameter. One would marvel to see how cunningly the drums a of the wheels. which were carved in relief of the same design, b and united with the sides of the bases, were fitted into the rims. But none the less they did so. And to the upper part of the corners were attached projections in the form of outstretched hands, on which was supported a spiral moulding d placed around the bottom of the laver, and the laver rested on the paws of an eagle e and a lion which were so well fitted together that to one looking at them they seemed to be one natural growth. Between these were palm-trees carved in relief. Such, then, was the construction of the ten bases. And in addition he also wrought ten round basins f or lavers of bronze, each of which held forty choeis, of for they were four cubits in height and the diameter of their rims was the same distance.h And he placed these lavers on the ten bases called Mechonoth.i Five of the lavers he placed on the left side of the temple, which was the side toward the north, and the same number on the south-east. Josephus uses the LXX word for Heb. kiyyôrôth.

9 So the LXX; Heb. bath. The Attic chous is equal to about 3 gallon, whereas the bath is equal to about 9 gallons. Josephus himself tells us, in A. iii. 197, that the hin (bath) is equal to 2 Attic choeis, i.e. one bath is equal to 12 choeis, which is correct.

h This last is an unscriptural detail.

Here Josephus uses the LXX transliteration.

Outside of this he built another sacred precinct h in the form of a quadrangle and erected great and wide porticoes which were entered by high gates, each of which faced one of the four quarters and was closed by golden doors. Into this precinct all the people who were distinguished by purity and their observance of the laws might enter. But wonderful and surpassing all description, and even, one might say, all sight, was the (third) sacred precinct i which he made outside of these, for he filled up with earth great valleys, into which because of their immense depth

Solomon's temple has some connexion with the stone barrier (δρύφακτος λίθινος) of three cubits high separating the outer court from the inner court, mentioned in B.J. v. 193. This is called sôrëg in the Mishnah, Middoth ii. 3.

one could not without difficulty look down, and bringing them up to a height of four hundred cubits he made them level with the top of the mountain on which the temple was built; in this way the outer precinct, which was open to the sky, was on a level with the temple. And he surrounded it with double porticoes supported by high columns of native stone, and they had roofs of cedar which were smoothly finished in panels. And all the doors which he made for this sacred precinct were of silver.

He then wrote a 1 Kings viii. to the leaders and elders of the Hebrews and ordered v. 2. them to assemble all the people at Jerusalem in order to see the temple and join in bringing the ark into it. And although the summons to Jerusalem was sent around to all, it was hardly by the seventh month that they came together, which month is called Thisri by the natives and Hyperberetaios by the building of Solomon's palace cf. § 76 note), while LXX 1 Kings introduces the passage on the assembly by the words, "And it came to pass that after Solomon had finished building the house of the Lord and his own house, after twenty years (7 years for the temple + 13 years for the palace), that King Solomon assembled, etc."

Macedonians. At this same time happened to fall the festival of Tabernacles. which is considered especially sacred and important by the Hebrews. So, then, they lifted up the ark and the tabernacle The ark is which Moses had set up, and all the vessels for the brought into the service of the sacrifices to God, and carried them temple. I Kings vi. into the temple. And before it went the king him- 1 self and all the people and the Levites, with sacrifices, drenching the ground with libations and the blood of numerous victims, and burning so vast a quantity of incense that all the air around was filled with it and carried its sweetness to those who were at a great distance; this was a sign of God's being present and dwelling-according to human belief-in the place which had been newly built and consecrated to Him. And indeed they did not weary of singing hymns or dancing until they reached the temple.b This, then, was the way in which they conveyed the ark. But when it was time to bring it into the adytum, the rest of the people went away, and only the priests carried it and set it down between the two cherubim. These, which were interlocked by the tips of their wings-so they had been made by the craftsmancovered the ark as under a kind of tent or dome. And the ark held nothing but the two stone tablets which preserved the ten commandments spoken by God to Moses on Mount Sinai inscribed upon them. But the lampstand and the table and the golden altar they placed in the temple before the adytum in the word in Josephus's time was used particularly of the festival of Tabernacles.

^b Scripture does not mention incense. The singing (but not dancing) is mentioned only in 2 Chron. and seems to have followed the deposition of the ark in the sanctuary.

After this solemn Solomon appeal to God he turned to address the multitude and blesses the made clear to them the power and providence of God i Kings viii. in that most of the future events which He had re-14. yealed to David, his father, had actually come to pass. and the rest would also come about, and how God Himself had given him his name even before he was born, and had foretold what he was to be called and that none but he should build Him a temple, on becoming king after his father's death. And now that they saw the fulfilment of these things in accordance with David's prophecies, he asked them to praise God and not despair of anything He had promised for their happiness, as if it were not to be, but to have faith because of what they had already seen.

(3) When the king had thus spoken to the crowd, Solomon's he looked again toward the temple and, raising his prayer. right hand b up to heaven, said, Not by deeds is it 22; 2 Chron. possible for men to return thanks to God for the benefits they have received, for the Deity stands in need of nothing a and is above any such recompense.

But with that (gift of speech), O Lord, through which we have been made by Thee superior to other creatures, we cannot but praise Thy greatness and give thanks for Thy kindnesses to our house and the Hebrew people, for with what other thing is it more fitting for us to appease Thee when wrathful, and, when ill disposed, to make Thee gracious than with our voice, which we have from the air, and know to ascend again through this element? a And so, with my voice I render thanks to Thee, first for my father's sake, whom Thou didst raise from obscurity to such great glory, and next on my own behalf, for whom unto the present day Thou hast done all that Thou didst foretell. And I beseech Thee henceforth to grant whatever God has power to bestow on men esteemed by Thee, and to increase our house for ever, as Thou didst promise David, my father, both in his lifetime and when he was near death, saying that the kingship should remain among us and that his descendants should transmit it to numberless successors. and did obeisance. But the king began to bless 1 Kings vill, God and urged the multitude to do the like, seeing 54. that they now had tokens of God's goodwill toward them, and to pray that such would be His treatment of them always and that their minds might be kept pure from all evil as they continued in righteousness and worship and in observance of the commandments which God had given them through Moses; for thus would the Hebrew nation be happy and the most blessed of all the races of men. And he exhorted them to remember that in the same way in which they had acquired their present blessings they would also preserve them surely and would make them greater and more numerous. For, he said, they ought to realize that not only had they received them because of their piety and righteousness, but that they would also maintain them through these same qualities, and that it is not so great a thing for men to acquire something which they have not had before as to preserve what is given them and be guilty of nothing which may harm it.a

^b Called, in Scripture, "the house of the forest of Lebanon."

^c This unscriptural detail is, of course, an anachronism. d Both the Heb. and LXX of 1 Kings vii. 5 are obscure, partly because Heb. šāqēph may mean either "beam" (so the Targum translates) or "window" (lit. "transparency"). The word θυρώματα used by Josephus is found in the LXX, where it translates Heb. mehezāh which seems to mean "window," but θυρώματα may also mean "door." It seems 642

Yet it too was worthy of note, and was built in a manner suitable to the prosperity of the Hebrews' country and their king; but we must describe its whole plan and arrangement, in order that those who will read this work may from this description form an idea and have some notion of its size.

hall a where the king sat to give judgement, and to it was joined another hall built for the queen, and the remaining chambers for eating and for resting after the discharge of public business, all of them floored with boards cut out of cedar. Some of these he built with stones of ten cubits, b and he covered the walls with another kind of sawn stone of great value, which is mined for the adornment of temples and enhancing the appearance of royal palaces, in a region celebrated for the places that produce it.c And the beauty of this stone was displayed in a pattern of three rows, while the fourth row made one admire the skill of the sculptors who had fashioned trees and plants of all kinds, giving shade with their branches and the leaves hanging down from them, and so exceedingly delicate that one would have imagined they actually moved and were covering the stone under them. The rest of the wall, up to the roof, was painted and enlivened with various colours and tints. And in addition to these, he built other chambers for pleasure, among them very long colonnades, situated in a beautiful part of the palace, in which was a very splendid hall for feasts and banquets, filled with gold. And the other vessels such as were needed in the hall for the service of guests at the feasts were all made of gold. But it is difficult to describe in detail the size and variety of the palace buildings, how many larger chambers there were, how many smaller ones and how many were underground and not visible, and the beauty of those parts open to the air, and the groves which gave a most delightful view and served as a refuge and shelter to the body from the heat of summer. To sum it up, he made the whole building of white marble, cedar, gold and silver, and decorated the roofs and walls with stones set in gold in the same manner as he had beautified the temple of God with them. ^a Bibl. Cabul; xxx (reading gebûl) δριον "boundary." b The only Semitic etymology which seems to fit this interpretation is the Aramaic root kbl, one meaning of which is "be barren." Josephus's explanation "not pleasing" is 648

but when Eiromos went to them and looked them over, he was ill pleased with the gift and sent word to Solomon that he had no use for the cities. And from that time on they were called the Land of Chabalon, for Chabalon in the Phoenician tongue is interpreted to mean "not pleasing." And the king of Tyre also sent Solomon tricky problems and enigmatic sayings, requesting him to clear them up for him and relieve his difficulties concerning the questions propounded. But, as Solomon was clever and keen-witted, none of these proved too hard for him and he successfully solved them all by the force of reason, and having discovered their meaning, brought it to light.

These two kings are also mentioned by Menander, Phoenician who translated the Tyrian records from the Phoenician Writers on Hiram's language into Greek speech, in these words: " And on reign. the death of Abibalos, his son Eiromos succeeded to his kingdom, who lived to the age of fifty-three and reigned thirty-four years. He it was who made the Eurychöros (Broad Place) embankment and set up the golden column in the temple of Zeus. Moreover he went off and cut timber from the mountain called Libanos for the roofs of the temples, and pulled down the ancient temples and erected new ones to Heracles e apparently based on the Scriptural phrase "and they (i.e. the cities) pleased him not." One rabbinic tradition explains the name from the usual meaning of kābûl which is " chained down"; other Jewish commentaries give an explanation which is closer to that of Josephus.

He also built cities which are counted among the most powerful, Asor b and Magedo,c and a third, Gazara, which had belonged to the country of the Philistines and against which Pharao had marched, and after a siege had taken it by storm and after killing all its inhabitants had razed it to the ground and then had given it as a gift to his daughter, who had been married to Solomon. The king, therefore, rebuilt it also, for it was naturally strong and could be useful in war or in times of sudden change. And not far from it he built two other cities, the name of one being Bētchōra, while the other was called Baleth. In addition to these he built still others. which were conveniently placed for enjoyment and pleasure and were naturally favoured with a mild temperature and seasonable fruits and irrigated with streams of water. He also advanced into the desert of Upper Syria h and, having taken possession of it, where excavations have yielded important finds dating from Solomon's times, as well as from other periods.

founded there a very great city at a distance of two days' journey from Upper Syria and one day's journey from the Euphrates, while from the great Babylon the distance was a journey of six days.ª Now the reason for founding the city so far from the inhabited parts of Syria was that further down there was no water anywhere in the land and that only in this place were springs and wells to be found. And so, when he had built this city and surrounded it with very strong walls, he named it Thadamora, a as it is still called by the Syrians, while the Greeks call it Palmyra.

(2) Such, then, were the activities which King The name "Pharaoh." Solomon at that time was carrying on. Now to those who ask why all the Egyptian kings from Minaias, the builder of Memphis, who lived many years before our forefather Abraham, down to Solomon—an interval of more than one thousand three hundred years b-were called Pharaothai, taking this name from Pharaothes, the first king to reign after the period intervening, I have thought it necessary to explain-in order to dispel their ignorance and make clear the reason for the name—that Pharao in Egyptian signifies "king." But I believe that a According to F. Ll. Griffith in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible, iii. 819, the Egyptian word pro, meaning house," was originally applied to the royal estate rather than to the person of the king and only came into common use as a title at the time of the New Kingdom (c. 1600 B.C.).

from childhood they had other names, and that when they became kings they changed them for that name which in their ancestral tongue signifies their royal authority. For so also the kings of Alexandria were first called by other names, but, when they assumed the kingship, were named Ptolemies after the first king. And the Roman emperors also, who from their birth are known by other names, are called Caesars, receiving this title from their princely office and rank, and do not keep the names by which their fathers called them. And I think it was for this reason that Herodotus of Halicarnassus, when he says a that there were three hundred and thirty kings of Egypt after Minaias, who built Memphis, did not mention their names, because they were all in common called Pharaothai. For, after the death of these kings, a woman ruled as queen, and he gives her name as Nikaulë, b making it clear that while the male kings could all have the same name, the woman could not share this, and for that reason he mentioned her by the name that naturally belonged to her. And I myself have discovered in the books of our own country that after the Pharaothes who was Solomon's father-in-law no king of Egypt was ever again called by this name, c and that later the afore-mentioned woman as queen of Egypt and Ethiopia came to Solomon. Now about her we shall write very shortly.d But I have mentioned these matters at this point in order to make plain that our books in many things agree with those of the Egyptians.

again to the king.

(5) Now the woman who at that time ruled as queen The Queen of Egypt and Ethiopia was thoroughly trained in of Sheba wisdom and remarkable in other ways, and, when she Solomon. heard of Solomon's virtue and understanding, was 2 Chron. ix. led to him by a strong desire to see him which arose 1. from the things told daily about his country. For, wishing to be convinced by experience and not merely by hearsay—which is likely to give assent to a false belief and then convince one of the opposite, since it depends wholly on those who bring reportsshe decided to go to him; and being very desirous of herself making trial of his wisdom by propounding questions and asking him to solve their difficult meaning, she came to Jerusalem with great splendour and show of wealth. For she brought with her camels laden with gold and various spices and precious stones. And the king received her gladly on her kingdom in S.W. Arabia, cf. Gen. x. 28, Job vi. 19 and Mt. xii. 42 (" the Queen of the South "). Rabbinic tradition describes Sheba as a land of sorcerers somewhere in the East, and Ginzberg vi. 292 thinks it "possible that the substitution of Egypt for Sheba by Josephus . . . is to be ascribed to the fact that in the Haggadah Egypt is the land of magic and witchcraft par excellence." But Josephus probably knew of some native Egyptian or Ethiopic tradition which connected the queen of the Arabian kingdom with Egypt and Ethiopia (cf. Isa. xliii. 3). This tradition which he got from Herodotus or some other Greek source (cf. §§ 158 f.) is found in Ethiopic literature and states that Menelik, the first king of Abyssinia, was a son of Solomon and Makkeda, whom they identify with the Queen of Sheba. For a discussion of this subject see J. B. Coulbeaux, Histoire de l'Abyssinie, i. 108 ff.

arrival and was studious to please her in all ways, in particular by mentally grasping with ease the ingenious problems she set him and solving them more quickly than anyone could have expected. But she was amazed at Solomon's wisdom when she realized how extraordinary it was and how much more excellent upon trial than what she had heard about it. She especially admired the palace for its beauty and size and, no less, for the arrangement of the buildings, for in this she saw the great wisdom of the king. But she was more than amazed at the hall called the Forest of Libanos and the lavishness of the daily meals and his table-ware and service and the apparel of his attendants, as well as the decorum, combined with skill, of their serving; and not least the sacrifices daily offered to God and the care bestowed on them by the priests and Levites. In return Solomon also presented her with many fine gifts, in particular with those which she selected as most desirable, for there was nothing which he did not give when she asked to have it; on the contrary, he showed his magnanimity by giving up whatever she asked for more readily than he presented gifts to her of his own choice. And so the queen of Egypt and Ethiopia, having obtained the gifts we have mentioned and given others to the king from among her possessions, returned to her own country.

abounding in, parks and flowing streams, and to this place he would make excursions, mounted high on his chariot.

(4) Exercising a divine thoughtfulness and zeal in Solomon's all things and being an ardent lover of beauty, he did chariot cities and not neglect the roads either, but those leading to horse Jerusalem, which was the royal city, he paved with trading. black stone, both for the convenience of wayfarers and in order to show the greatness of his wealth and power. And he divided the chariots and disposed 1 Kings x. 26 them in such a way that there was a definite number (LXX X. 29); of them in every city, while he himself kept only a 25. few about him; and these cities he called Cities of Chariots. As for silver, b the king made it as plentiful in Jerusalem as were stones, and cedar-wood, which had not been found there before, he made as plentiful as the sycamore-trees with which the plains of Judea abound. He also gave orders to the merchants of Egypt to bring and sell him a chariot with two horses for six hundred drachmas c of silver, which he himself sent d to the kings of Syria and those beyond the Euphrates.e

would be equal to 600 drachmas. In making 600 drachmas the price of a chariot with two horses, Josephus combines the Heb. and LXX texts, as Weill has noted.

^d The bibl. text (1 Kings x. 29) is obscure and does not make clear who exported the horses to the east. Heb. has beyādām hôṣī'ũ "by their hand they sent them out," apparently referring to "the king's merchants" mentioned in vs. 28; LXX, reading beyādām as bayyām "by sea," has κατά θάλασσαν έξεπορεύοντο. With the other textual difficulties in the bibl. verse we need not deal, as they do not bear on Josephus's text.

all kings and most beloved by God, and in understanding and wealth surpassed those who had ruled over the Hebrews before him, he did not persevere in this way until his death, but abandoned the observance of his fathers' customs and came to an end not at all like what we have already said about him, for he became madly enamoured of women and indulged in excesses of passion; not satisfied with the women Solomon's of his own country alone, he married many from foreign wives. foreign nations as well, Sidonians, Tyrians, Ammanites and Idumaeans, thereby transgressing the laws of Moses who forbade marriage with persons of other races,d and he began to worship their gods to gratify his wives and his passion for them—which is the very thing the lawgiver foresaw when he warned I Kings xi. the Hebrews against marrying women of other 1. countries lest they might be entangled with foreign customs and fall away from those of their fathers, and worship the gods of these women while neglecting to honour their own God. But Solomon, carried away by thoughtless pleasure, disregarded these warnings and took as wives seven hundred women, the daughters of princes and nobles, and three hundred concubines, and beside these the daughter of the king of Egypt; and he was very soon prevailed upon by them to the extent of imitating their ways, and was forced to give a sign of his favour and affection for them by living in accordance with their ancestral customs. As he advanced in age, and his reason became in time too feeble to oppose to these the memory of his own country's practices, he showed still greater disrespect for his own God and continued to honour those whom his wives had introduced. But even before this there had been an occasion on which he sinned and went astray in respect of the observance of the laws, namely when he made the images of the bronze bulls underneath the sea which he had set up as an offering, and those of the lions around his own throne, for in making them he committed an impious act.a And though he had a most excellent and near example of virtue in his father and in the glory which his father was able to leave behind him because of his piety toward God, he did not imitate him-not even after God had twice appeared to him in his sleep and exhorted him to imitate his father,—and so he died ingloriously. For at once there came a prophet b Solomon is sent by God, who told him that his unlawful acts had God's disnot escaped Him, and threatened that he should not pleasure. I Kings xi, long continue in his course with impunity but that, 11. while in his lifetime he should not be deprived of his kingdom since the Deity had promised his father David to make him his successor, on his death He would cause this to befall Solomon's son and, while not taking all the people away from him, would deliver ten tribes to his servant c and leave only two d to David's grandson for the sake of David himself, because he had loved God, and for the sake of Jerusalem, in which He wished to have a temple.

^a Neither Scripture nor rabbinic tradition imputes any sin to Solomon in making these vessels and images. Tradition does, however, find fault with his amassing of gold and silver, of. Ginzberg iv. 129. Perhaps Josephus has chosen these two examples of wrongdoing in preference to mentioning the altars which Solomon built in Jerusalem to Ammonite and Moabite gods, 1 Kings xi. 7.

^b Here, as elsewhere (cf. A. vii. 72, 294), Josephus introduces a prophet where Scripture represents God as speaking to a certain person directly; a rabbinic tradition agrees with Josephus in mentioning the prophet Ahijah as God's spokesman on this occasion.

(6) When Solomon heard this, he was grieved and Hadad sorely troubled at the thought that almost all the (Adados) the Edomite good things for which he was envied were changing rebels against for the worse. Nor did a long time elapse after Solomon. the prophet's announcement to him of what was 14 coming, but immediately God set up an enemy against him, named Aderos, who had the following reason for his enmity. He was a child of royal lineage of Idumean race when Joab, David's commander, subdued Idumea b and within six months destroyed all those who were of fighting age and able to bear arms; and he fled and came to Pharao, king of Egypt, who received him kindly and gave him a dwelling and land to sustain him. And when he grew up, Pharaō loved him so much that he gave him in marriage his own wife's sister, named Thaphine,c and by her he had a son, who was brought up together with the children of the king. Now when Aderos heard in Egypt of the death of both David and Joab, he went to Pharaō and asked him for permission to go to his native country. But the king inquired what he lacked or what had befallen him that he was anxious to leave him, and, although Aderos frequently pressed him and pleaded with him, he did not at that time obtain his release.d But at the time when things were already beginning to go ill for Solomon because of the unlawful acts we have mentioned and God's anger on their account, Pharaō gave his consent and Aderos came to Idumea. And not being able to cause it to revolt from Solomon-for it was occupied by many garrisons and because of them a revolution was not a matter of free choice nor without peril, he removed from there and went to Svria.b There falling in with a certain person named Razos.c who had run away from his master Adraazaros,d the king of Sophene, and was pillaging the country, he joined forces with this man and with a band of robbers under him went up country and, taking possession of that part of Syria, was proclaimed king thereof g: and he overran the country of the Israelites, damaging it and plundering it while Solomon was still alive. command over the tribe of Joseph.^a Now, as Jeroboam on that occasion was going out of Jerusalem. there met him a prophet from the city of Silo, named Achias, and, having greeted Jeroboam, he led him away from the road and went aside a little distance to a spot where there was no one else.c Then, tearing the cloak which covered him into twelve pieces, he bade Jeroboam take ten of them, announcing that such was God's will and that He had torn apart the kingdom of Solomon, giving one tribe and that adjoining it to his son d because of the promise He had made to David, "while to you He has given ten tribes, since Solomon has sinned against Him and gone over wholly to his wives and their gods. Now that you know the reason why God has changed and has set His mind against Solomon, try to be righteous and observe the laws, for there awaits you the greatest of all rewards for piety and honour shown to God, which is to become as great as you know David to have been."

(8) Elated, therefore, by the prophet's words, Jeroboam's Jeroboam, who was a youth of ardent nature and ambitious of great things, did not remain idle. And when he entered upon his command and called to mind what had been revealed by Achias, he at once attempted to persuade the people to turn away from Solomon and to start a revolt and transfer the supreme urged him to lighten their bondage somewhat and to be more lenient than his father, for, they said, the yoke they had borne under him had been heavy indeed, and they would be better disposed toward him and accept servitude more willingly if treated with kindness than if made to fear him. But when he said that in three days he would give them an answer to their request, he immediately roused their suspicions by not assenting to their wishes on the spot, for they held kindness and friendliness to be an easy matter, especially for a young man. Nevertheless the fact of his deliberating and not refusing them on the instant seemed to offer some ground for good hope.^a

(2) He then called together his father's friends Rehoboam's and considered with them what kind of answer he harsh to should give the multitude. And they, as was to be the people. expected of men of kindly disposition and acquainted 6; 2 Ohron. with the nature of crowds, advised him to speak to x.6. the people in a friendly spirit and in more popular style than was usual for the royal dignity, for in this way he would secure their goodwill, since subjects naturally liked affability in their kings and to be treated by them almost as equals.^b But this advice, which was so good and beneficial, perhaps for all occasions, or, if not for all, at any rate for that particular occasion, he rejected; and it was God, I believe. who caused him to condemn what should have been of benefit to him. He then called together the young men who had been brought up with him and, after telling them what the advice of the elders had been, bade them say what they thought he should do.

they, whom neither their youth nor God permitted to discern a better course, advised him to reply to the people that his little finger a was thicker than his father's loins and, if they had found his father excessively harsh, they would experience much more unpleasant treatment from himself; if his father had chastised them with whips, they should expect him to do the same with scorpions. With this advice the king was pleased, thinking such an answer proper to the royal dignity; and, when the multitude assembled on the third day to hear him speak, all the people were excited and anxious to hear what the king might say, supposing that it would be something friendly. But, ignoring the counsel of his (older) friends, he answered them as the young men had advised. This came about in accordance with the will of God, in order that what Achias had prophesied might be accomplished.d

had built, they threatened to desert him. So bitter did they feel toward him and so great was the anger they nourished that, when he sent Adoramos, b who was in charge of the levies, to appease them and soften their mood by persuading them to forgive what he had said if there had been in it anything rash or ill-tempered owing to his youth, they did not let him speak but threw stones at him and killed him.c Roboamos, seeing this and imagining himself the target of the stones with which the crowd had killed his minister, was afraid that he might actually suffer this dreadful fate d and immediately mounted his chariot and fled to Jerusalem. Although the tribes of Judah and Benjamin elected him king, the rest of the populace from that day revolted from the sons of David and proclaimed Jeroboam head of the state. Then Roboamos, the son of Solomon, held an assembly of the two tribes which remained subject to him, and was prepared to take from their number an army of a hundred and eighty thousand f chosen men and march out against Jeroboam and his people in order to force him by war to be his servant; but he was prevented by God through the prophet g from

• Josephus consistently ignores (cf. §§ 197, 207) the contradiction in Scripture, 1 Kings xii., between vs. 20 (omitted in 2 Chron.) which says that only the tribe of Judah followed Rehoboam, and vs. 21 in which Judah and Benjamin are both said to be under his rule.

^a Scripture dates Jeroboam's festival on the 15th of the eighth month, which would be exactly a month after the traditional celebration of the festival of Tabernacles. Josephus is, perhaps, more logical in making Jeroboam's celebration coincide with that in Jerusalem, but Jewish commentators justify the Biblical text (cf. 1 Kings xii. 33, "in the month which he had devised of his own heart") by explaining that Jeroboam wished either deliberately to alter the older custom or to avoid entirely alienating the Judaeans, by giving them an opportunity of visiting his sanctuary after they had observed the festival at Jerusalem in the seventh month.

JEWISH ANTIQUITIES, VIII. 230-233

(5) When the festival came round in the seventh ^a A prophet month, Jeroboam, wishing to observe it himself in republic Bethel just as the two tribes were celebrating it in at Bethel. I Kings xii. Jerusalem, built an altar before the heifer and, having 32. made himself high priest, b went up to the altar with his own priests. But as he was about to offer the sacrifices and the whole burnt-offerings c in the sight of all the people, there came to him from Jerusalem a prophet named Jadon, whom God had sent, and, standing in the midst of the multitude and in the hearing of the king, addressed the altar in these words: "God has foretold that there shall be one of the line of David, named Josias, who will sacrifice upon you the false priests living in his time and will burn upon you the bones of these misleaders of the people, these impostors and unbelievers. Furthermore, that these people may believe that so it will be, I shall foretell to them a sign that will be given. The altar shall be broken in an instant and all the fat of the victims on it shall be spilled upon the ground.' Roused to fury by these words of the prophet, Jeroboam stretched out his hand to order his arrest. But

^b Scripture says merely that he himself made the offering. ^c Apparently Josephus takes Heb. ydal as a hiphil (causative) form meaning "offered the burnt-offering ($\delta l\bar{a}h$)," while xxx, taking it as a qal (intransitive) form meaning "went up," has $\dot{a}v\dot{\epsilon}\beta\eta$. Or possibly the "whole burnt-offerings" in Josephus's text may be an interpretation of Heb. haqtir (xxx $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\iota\theta\bar{\nu}\sigma al$; A.V. wrongly "burn incense") which implies the offering of various kinds of sacrifice including the burnt-offering.

no sooner was his hand stretched out than it was paralysed and he no longer had the power to draw it back to himself but found it hanging numb and lifeless. And the altar was broken and everything on it was swept to the ground, as the prophet had foretold. Then, having learnt that the man was telling the truth and possessed divine foreknowledge, he begged him to pray that God bring back life to his right hand. So the prophet entreated God to grant him this prayer, and Jeroboam, overjoyed when his hand regained its natural use, asked the prophet to dine with him. But Jadon said that he dare not enter his house nor taste bread or water in that city, for God had forbidden this to him as well as to return by the road on which he had come, saying he must go by another. The king admired him for his self-control but was himself in a state of fear, suspecting from what had been foretold to him a change in his fortunes that would not be for his good.a

So they made haste to do as they were ordered, and he mounted it to ride in pursuit of the prophet; when he came upon him resting under a tree that was thick with leaves and gave as much shade as a huge oak, a he first greeted him and then proceeded to blame him for not entering his house and partaking of his hospitality. This explanation of God's motive in causing the prophet's death is an addition to Scripture.

him off his beast and killed him; to the ass he did no harm at all but lay down beside him and guarded him as well as the prophet's corpse, a until some wayfarers saw them and came to the city to tell the false prophet. Thereupon he sent his sons and brought the body into the city and, having honoured it with a costly funeral, instructed his sons to bury him also, when he was dead, with the prophet, saying that everything was true which he had prophesied against that city and the altar and the priests and the false prophets, but that he himself would suffer no mutilation after death if he were buried together with the prophet, as their bones could not be told apart. And so, after burying the prophet and giving his sons these instructions, being a wicked and impious man he went to Jeroboam and said, "Why, I should like to know, were you The false disturbed by that foolish fellow's words?" And, prophet reassures when the king told him what had happened to the Jeroboam. altar and his own hand, and spoke of him as a truly divine and excellent prophet, the old man began to weaken this opinion of him with cunning and, by giving a plausible explanation of the things that had happened, to impair their true significance; for he attempted to persuade him that his hand had been numbed by the fatigue of carrying the sacrifices and then, after being rested, had again returned to its natural condition, and that the altar, being new and having received a great many large victims, had fallen

b The "costly" funeral is an unscriptural detail.

The whole of the following speech (§§ 243-245) is an addition to Scripture, probably put in by Josephus, as Weill suggests, to explain why Jeroboam continued in his evil course, of 1 Kings xiii. 33 "After this thing Jeroboam turned not from his evil wav."

Thus, he said, there was nothing of a prophet either in his person or in what he had spoken. By these words he convinced the king, and, having wholly turned his thoughts away from God and from holy and righteous deeds, he urged him on to impious acts. And so greatly did he outrage the Deity and transgress His laws that every day he sought to commit some new act more heinous than the reckless acts he was already guilty of. Hebron. These, which were in the tribe and territory of Judah, he built first; and he also constructed other large cities in the territory of Benjamin, and, having walled them about, set garrisons and captains in all of them and in each of the cities stored much grain, wine and oil and an abundance of other things needed for sustenance, and, in addition to these, shields and barbed lances amounting to many tens of thousands.a Then there came to him at Jerusalem priests from among all the Israelites, and Levites and any others of the people who were good and righteous men and had left their own cities to worship God in Jerusalem, for they would not submit to being forced to worship the heifers which Jeroboam had made. And they added strength to Jeroboam's kingdom for three years. (2) But often, I think, a cause of men's falling Rehoboam's into evil ways and lawlessness lies in the greatness 2 Chron. of their affairs and in the improvement of their xii. 1; position. So, for example, Roboamos, seeing how 1 Kings viv. 22. greatly his kingdom had increased in strength, was misled into unjust and impious acts and showed disrespect for the worship of God, so that even the people under his rule began to imitate his unlawful deeds. For the morals of subjects are corrupted simultaneously with the characters of their rulers, and they do not allow their own moderation to remain a reproach to their rulers' intemperance but follow their evil ways as if they were virtues, since it is impossible to show approval of the acts of kings except by doing as they do.b This, then, was the case with the people governed by Roboamos, who, when he acted impiously and in violation of the laws, were careful not to give offence to the king by wishing to be righteous. But, as an avenger of the outrage to Him, God sent the Egyptian king Isōkos, about whom Herodotus was in error in attributing his acts to Sesöstris.d For it was this Isōkos who in the fifth Shishak year of Roboamos's reign marched against him with (Isokos) invades many tens of thousands, and there followed him one Palestine. thousand two hundred chariots, sixty thousand horse-2 Chron. xii. men and four hundred thousand foot-soldiers. Ethiopians.^a So then, after invading the country of the Hebrews, he seized the strongest cities of Roboamos's kingdom without a battle and, having secured them with garrisons, at last advanced upon Jerusalem.

(3) Although Roboamos and the multitude, who Shishak were shut up in the city by the advance of Isōkos's Jerusalem army, entreated God to grant them victory and 2 Chron. deliverance, they did not prevail upon God to side with them. Then the prophet Samaias c told them that God threatened to abandon them just as they had abandoned their worship of Him. When they heard this, their spirits at once fell and, no longer seeing any hope of deliverance, they all hastened to acknowledge that God might justly turn away from them since they had acted impiously toward Him and had violated His ordinances. But when God saw them in this state of mind and confessing their sins, He said to the prophet that He would not destroy them but would, nevertheless, make them subject to the Egyptians, in order that they might learn which was the easier task, whether to serve man or God. And when Isokos took the city without a battle, Roboamos admitting him because he feared him, he did not abide by the terms of the agreement they had made, d but sacked the temple, emptied the treasuries of God and the king, and carried off untold amounts of gold and silver, leaving not a single thing behind. He also removed the golden shields and bucklers, of the Troglodytes, and cites Pliny, Hist. Nat. vi. 172 and Strabo xvi. 3. 8.

which King Solomon had made, nor did he overlook the golden quivers which David had set up as an offering to God after taking them from the King of Sophēnē.a This done, he returned to his own country. This expedition is also mentioned by Herodotus of Halicarnassus, who was in error only about the king's name and in saying that he marched against many other nations and reduced Palestinian Syria to slavery after capturing the inhabitants without a battle.b Now it is evident that it is our nation which he means to refer to as subdued by the Egyptians, for he adds that their king left behind, in the country of those who had surrendered without a battle, pillars on which he had female sex-organs engraved.c But it was Roboamos, our king, who surrendered the city without a battle. Herodotus also says that the Ethiopians had learned the practice of circumcision from the Egyptians, "for the Phoenicians and the Syrians in Palestine admit that they learned it from the Egyptians." Now it is clear that no others of the Syrians in Palestine practise circumcision beside ourselves. But concerning these matters everyone may speak as he sees fit.

died at the age of fifty-seven, after a reign of seventeen years a; he was a man of boastful and foolish nature, who, by not heeding his father's friends, lost his royal power. He was buried in Jerusalem in the tombs of the kings and was succeeded on the throne by his son Abias in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam's reign over the ten tribes. This, then, is the end of Roboamos's history. But now in what follows we have to relate the events of Jeroboam's reign and how he ended his life. For he did not cease nor desist from outraging God, but all the time continued to erect altars on the high mountains and to appoint priests from among the common people.

He bade her go and inquire, as if she were a stranger, whether the child would survive his illness. So she changed her dress, as her husband had ordered her,d and came to the city of Silō, where Achias was living. And as she was about to enter the house of the prophet, whose eyes were dim from age, God appeared to him and forty-one; thus he would have been fifty-eight years old at his death.

told him both that Jeroboam's wife had come to him and how he was to answer what she had come there to ask. So, when the woman entered the house in the guise of a commoner and a stranger, he cried out, "Come in, wife of Jeroboam! Why do you disguise yourself? For your coming here is not unknown to God, who has appeared to me and revealed your coming, and has instructed me in the things I am to say. Return, therefore, to your husband and tell Ahijah foretells him that God has spoken as follows. For a certain one will be set up by me as king over all this people, and not one of Jeroboam's line will he leave alive. The people too shall share this punishment by being driven from their good land and scattered over the country beyond the Euphrates, because they have followed the impious ways of the king and worship the gods made by him, abandoning their sacrifices to me.' And you, woman, hasten to your husband and tell him these things. But your son you will find dead, for, as you enter the city, his life will leave him. And, when he is buried, he shall be wept for by all the people and honoured with general mourning, for of all of Jeroboam's line

When he had prophesied these things, the woman rushed out, thrown into confusion and deeply grieved at the death of the son spoken of; along the way she lamented and beat her breast at the thought of the child's approaching end, and wretched over her misfortune and beset by irremediable woe, she pressed on with a haste that meant ill luck for her son-for the more she hurried, the sooner she was destined to see him dead-but was necessary on her husband's account.a And. when she arrived, she found the child breathing his last, as the prophet had said; and she told the king every-

And, when xiii. 2. the other heard of Jeroboam's approach, he was not dismayed, but, with a spirit rising above his youth and the hopes of the enemy, raised an army from among the two tribes and confronted Jeroboam at a place called Mount Samaron, b near which he encamped and prepared for battle. His force amounted to four hundred thousand, while Jeroboam's army was twice as large. Now, as the armies were drawn up against each other, ready for action and the hazards of war, and were about to engage, Abias, who stood on an elevated spot, motioned with his hand and asked the people and Jeroboam first to hear him in quiet; and,

I wonder, therefore, how you could revolt 2 Chron. from my father and go over to his servant Jeroboam, xiii. 4. and have now come here with him to make war on those who were chosen by God to reign, and to deprive them of the royal power which still remains to them, for the larger part of the realm Jeroboam has until now been unjustly holding. But I do not believe that he will enjoy possession of this for very long, but, when he has paid God the penalty for what he has done in the past, he will end his transgressions and the insults which he has never ceased to offer Him, persuading you to do the same. As for you who were never wronged in any way by my father, but because, following the advice of wicked men, in a public assembly he spoke in a manner that displeased you,-you deserted him, as it seemed, but in reality you have separated yourselves from God and His laws. And yet it would have been fair for you to forgive not only the unpleasant words of a man so young and inexperienced in governing people, but also any further disagreeable act to which his youth and his ignorance of public affairs might have led him, for the sake of his father Solomon and the benefits you have received from him. For the merits of the fathers should be a palliation of the sins of their children.a You, however, took no account of these things either then or now, but have brought this great army of yours against us; and in what does it place its hope of victory? Is it, perhaps, in the golden heifers and the altars on the mountains, which are proofs of your impiety and not by any means of your devoutness? Or is it your numbers, which far exceed those of our army, that make you confident? But there is no strength whatever in many tens of thousands when an army fights in an unjust cause. For it is only in justice and piety toward God that the surest hope of conquering one's adversaries is bound to lie, and this belongs to us who have from the beginning observed the laws and worshipped our own God, whom no hands have formed out of perishable matter and no wicked king has cunningly made to deceive the populace, but who is His own work and the beginning and end of all things. I advise you, therefore, even now to repent and adopt the better plan of ceasing from warfare and to respect the rights of your country and the power which has led you on to so great a height of prosperity." a

(3) Such was the speech which Abias made to the Abijah's people. But, while he was still speaking, Jeroboam victory secretly sent some of his soldiers to surround Abias Jeroboam. from certain parts of the camp that were not observed. 2 Chron xiii. 13. And, when he was caught in the enemy's midst, his army was alarmed and their spirits sank, but Abias encouraged them and urged them to put their hope in God, saying that He was not encircled by the enemy.b And all of them together called upon God to be their ally and, when the priests had sounded the trumpets, they rushed upon the enemy with an exultant shout.

Josephus greatly amplifies the speech of Abijah.

Then God crushed the spirit of the enemy and broke their strength, while He made Abias's army stronger. Such a slaughter was never recorded to have been made a in any war of Greeks or barbarians as they made in slaying the soldiers of Jeroboam when they were permitted by God to win so wonderful and celebrated a victory, b for they struck down five hundred thousand of their foes and plundered their strongest cities after taking them by storm; these were Bethel and its province and Isana c and its province.d And Jeroboam, after this defeat, was never again powerful so long as Abias lived. In the course of these two years he led an army against Gabathon, b a city belonging to the Philistines, and undertook a long siege to capture it. But he was killed as the victim of a plot formed by one of his friends named Basanes, the son of Seidos, who took over the royal power after Asanos's death and destroyed the entire family of Jeroboam. And so it came about, in accordance with the prophecy of God, that some of Jeroboam's kin met death in the city and were torn to pieces and devoured by dogs, while others died in the fields and were eaten by birds.6 Thus did the house of Jeroboam suffer fitting punishment for his impiety and lawlessness.

Now he had been reigning for ten years b when Zaraios, the king of Ethiopia, marched against him with a large force consisting of nine hundred thousand foot-soldiers, one hundred thousand horsemen d and three hundred chariots. And when he had marched as far as the city of Marisa e-this being in the tribe of Judah-, Asanos met him with his own force and drew up his army over against him in a certain valley called Saphatha, f not far from the city. But on seeing the Ethiopian host he cried aloud and prayed to God for victory and the destruction of many myriads of the enemy, for, he said, in nothing else than His help, which can make the few triumph over the many, and the weak over the strong, would he put his trust when going out to meet Zaraios in battle.

carried off much gold and silver a and brought away a great deal of spoil and camels, beasts of burden and flocks of sheep. And so, when Asanos and the army with him had received from God this great victory and gain, they turned back to Jerusalem. As they The were approaching it, there met them on the road a admonition prophet named Azarias. He bade them halt their prophet journey, and began to speak to them, saying that 2 Chron. they had obtained this victory from God because they xv. 1. had shown themselves righteous and pure and had always acted in accordance with the will of God. If, then, he said, they so continued, God would grant them always to overcome their foes and live happily, but, if they abandoned His worship, everything would turn out to the contrary and the time would come "when no true prophet will be found among your people nor any priest to give righteous judgement, but your cities shall be laid waste and the nation scattered over all the earth to lead the life of aliens and wanderers." c He therefore advised them to be virtuous while they still had time, and not ungraciously refuse to accept the benevolence of God. When the king and the people heard these words, they rejoiced, and all together and each privately took thought for what was right. The king also sent men throughout the country to watch over the enforcement of the laws.d

(3) Such was the state of things under Asanos, the The reign king of the two tribes. I shall now return to the of Bassha people of Israel and their king Basanes, who killed 1 Kings Jeroboam's son Nabados and seized the royal power. Now he lived in the city of Tharse, a which he had made his residence, and reigned there twenty-four years. But being more wicked and impious than Jeroboam and his son, he brought many evils upon the people and gravely outraged God, who sent to him the prophet Jeus b and warned him that He would destroy all his line and would utterly crush them under the same calamities as He had brought upon the house of Jeroboam, because, after having been made king by Him, he had not requited His kindness by justly and piously governing the people -a course which would, in the first place, be of benefit to those who followed it, and then pleasing to God as well-but had imitated Jeroboam, the vilest of men, and, although Jeroboam himself was dead, had revealed his wickedness as still living. Therefore, He said, Basanes should justly experience a like ill fate since he had acted in a like manner. But Baasha's Basanes, although he heard beforehand what evils were destined to befall him together with his whole family because of his reckless conduct, did not restrain himself thereafter in order to avoid being thought still more wicked and so meeting death, nor seek, by repenting thenceforth at least of his past misdeeds, to obtain pardon from God; on the contrary, like those had foretold to him that He would not give rain in those years nor send down dew upon the land until he himself should appear. a And, having sworn to these things, he withdrew into the south country b and made his home beside a stream c which also gave him water to drink: as for his food, the ravens brought it to him every day. But, when the river dried up for want of rain, he came to the city of Sarephtha, d not far from Sidon and Tyre—it lies between them-at the command of God, for He said that he would there find a widow who would provide him with food. Now when he was a little way from Elijah and the city gate, he saw a labouring woman who was the widow 1 Kings gathering wood. Thereupon, as God revealed to xvii. 10. him that this was she who was to give him food. he went up to her and, after greeting her, asked her to fetch him some water to drink, but, when she started out, he called her back and bade her bring some bread as well. But she swore that she had nothing in the house except a handful of meal and a little oil, and said that she was setting out for home, after gathering the wood, to knead the meal and make bread for herself and her child; after this was eaten they must perish, consumed by hunger, for there was no longer anything left. Whereupon he said, "Even so, be of good courage and go your way in hope of better things; but first prepare a little food and bring it to me, for I prophesy to you that neither the bowl of meal

When the prophet had said these things, she went to her home and did as he had told her; and she had enough food for herself and her child as well as for the prophet, nor did they lack anything to eat until the drought finally ended. This rainless time is also mentioned by Menander a in his account of the acts of Ithobalos, the king of Tyre, in these words: "There was a drought in his reign, which lasted from the month of Hyperberetaios until the month of Hyperberetaios in the following year. But he made supplication to the gods, whereupon a heavy thunderstorm broke out. He it was who founded the city of Botrys in Phoenicia, and Auza in Libya." This, then, is what Menander wrote, referring to the drought which came in Achab's reign, for it was in his time that Ithobalos was king of Tyre.

But he urged her to take heart and give her son over to him, for he would, he said, restore him to her alive. So she gave him over, and he carried him into the chamber in which he himself lived, and placed him on the bed; then he cried aloud to God, saying that He would ill requite the woman who had received him and nourished him, if He took her son from her, and he prayed God to send the breath into the child again and give him life. Thereupon God, because He took pity on the mother and also because He wished graciously to spare the prophet from seeming to have come to her for the purpose of harming her, a beyond all expectation brought the child back to life. Then the mother thanked the prophet and said that now she clearly realized that the Deity spoke with him.

(4) After a little time b had passed, the prophet, in Ahab sends accordance with the will of God, went to King Achab men to find to inform him that rain was coming. Now at that I Kings time a famine held the whole country in its power. xviii. 1. and there was a lack of necessary provisions so that not only did men have a scarcity of bread but, because of the drought, the earth did not yield even the grass necessary for the pasturing of horses and other beasts. So the king called Obedias, who was in charge of his estate, and told him that he wished him to go out to the springs of water and winter streams in order to cut any grass that they might find near them and give it to the beasts for fodder; he also said that he had sent men throughout the entire earth to look for the prophet Elijah, but they had not found him; and he commanded Obedias to accompany him. So, when they had decided to set out, Obedias and the king, dividing the roads, went each by a different road. Now it had happened at the time when Queen Jezabelē killed the prophets that Obedias hid a hundred prophets in underground

^a The word "underground," adopted as the correct reading, is an unscriptural detail; the variant "in caves under Garis" is unintelligible. It is just possible, however, that ὑπὸ Γάρις arises from a careless reading of Heb. mɨ arāh (or Targum mearthā) "cave"; the syllable me may have been taken as the Heb. prep. "from," and 'ārāh transliterated (as normally) as Γαρά, thus giving ἀπὸ Γαρά (or Γαρθά), 750

caves a and fed them, though giving them only bread and water. As Obedias, therefore, was separated from the king and was alone, the prophet Elijah b met him. Obedias inquired of him who he was, c and, when he found out, did obeisance to him. Thereupon the prophet bade him go to the king and tell him that Elijah was coming to him. The other then asked him what harm he himself had done him that he was sending him to one who was seeking to kill the prophet and had searched every land for him; did he perhaps not know that the king had not overlooked a single place to which he might send men who were to lead Elijah to his death if they caught him? Indeed, he said, he was afraid that if God appeared to Elijah a second time, the prophet might go away to another place and then, when the king sent for him, he would not be able to find him in whatever part of the world he might be, and so he himself would be put to death. He therefore urged him to look out for his safety, telling him of his zeal on behalf of Elijah's fellows in the prophetic art, d for he had saved a hundred prophets after Jezabelē had destroyed all the others, and had kept them hidden and fed them. But Elijah bade him go without any fear to the king, first giving him sworn assurances that he would positively appear before Achab that very day.

(5) When Obedias informed the king of Elijah's appearance, Achab went to meet him and asked him which was further corrupted to $i\pi\delta$ $\Gamma d\rho is$. This suggestion is in anger whether it was he who had brought evil upon Elijah's the Hebrew people and had caused the barrenness of with the the soil. Thereupon the prophet, without flattering prophets of bala on him in the least, said that it was Achab himself and Mt. Carmel. his family who had brought on all these misfortunes 1 Kings xviii. 16, by introducing foreign gods into the country and worshipping them, while their own God, who was the only true one, they had abandoned and no longer gave Him any thought. Now, however, he bade him go off and gather all the people to him on Mount Carmel as well as his prophets and those of his wifetelling him how many there were a-and also the prophets of the groves, some four hundred in number. And, when at Achab's summons they had all gathered together on the afore-mentioned mountain, the prophet Elijah stood up in their midst and asked how long they would go on living in that way, divided in thought and opinion. If they believed the native God to be the only true God, he urged them to follow Him and His commandments, but if they thought nothing of Him and, instead, considered that they ought to serve the foreign gods, he advised them to go with these. Then, as the people made no answer to these words, Elijah asked that a test be made of the respective powers of the foreign gods and his own and that he, being His only prophet, while their gods had four hundred, be allowed to take an ox and, after slaughtering it, place it on a pile of wood without kindling a fire, and that they do the same; then they should call upon their gods and he upon his to set the wood on fire, for if this happened, they would learn the true nature of God. When this proposal was accepted, Elijah bade the prophets select an ox and sacrifice first and call upon their own gods. But, since nothing came of the prophets' prayers and appeals after they had sacrificed, Elijah mocked them and told them to call their gods a in a loud voice, for either they were on a journey b or were asleep. So they did this from dawn to midday o and cut themselves with knives and barbed lances after the custom of their country, until, when about to offer his sacrifice, he bade them retire and the others draw near to watch that he should not secretly apply fire to the wood. Then, when the crowd had come near, he took twelve stones, one for each tribe of the Hebrew people, and with them erected an altar, around which he dug a very deep trench; next he placed the faggots on the altar and upon them laid the victims, after which he ordered the people to take four jars filled with water from the fountain and pour them over the altar so that the water overflowed and the whole trench was filled as though from a welling spring. Having done these things, he began to pray to God and entreat Him to make His power manifest

In fear of this Elijah fled to the city called Bersubee -it is the furthest city in that part of the territory of the tribe of Judah which borders on the country of the Idumaeans—and, after leaving his servant there, withdrew into the wilderness. Then he prayed that he might die, saving he was no better than his fathers that he should long for life when they were gone, and lay down to sleep under a tree. But he was wakened by someone and, when he arose, found food and water laid before him.9 So he ate it and, after gathering strength from the food, went to the mountain called Sinai, where Moses is said to have received the laws from God. And again he heard a voice telling him to come out into the open air on the morrow, c for so he should learn what he must do. The next day, therefore, he came out of the cave and heard the earth rumble and saw a brilliant fiery light.d And, when all became quiet, a divine voice exhorted him not to be alarmed by what was happening, for none of his enemies should have him in their power e; and it commanded him to return to his own land and appoint Jehu, the son of Nemesaios, to be king of the people, and Azaēlos i to be king of Damascus in Syria, while he should make Elisha, t of the city of Abela, prophet in his place. When Elijah heard these words, he returned to the country of the Hebrews and came upon Elisha, the son of Saphates, a as he was ploughing and some others with him, who were driving twelve yoke of oxen, and, going up to him, he threw his own mantle over him. Thereupon Elisha immediately began to prophesy,b and, leaving his oxen, followed Elijah. But he asked to be allowed to take leave of his parents, and, when Elijah bade him do so, he parted from them and then went with the prophet c; and so long as Elijah was alive he was his disciple and attendant. Such, then, is the history of this prophet.

But the other refused to do this, saying that he would himself enjoy the fruits of his own land, which he had inherited from his father. Then the king, who was aggrieved, as if at an insult, at not getting the other's property, would neither bathe g nor take food; and, when his wife Jezabelē inquired why he grieved and would neither bathe nor have his midday meal or supper served to him, he told her of Naboth's contrariness and how, in spite of his having used mild words toward him, hardly in keeping with the royal authority. a he had been insulted by being refused what he had asked for. She, however, urged him not to be dispirited over these things but to cease grieving and turn to caring for his body as usual, for she would attend to Naboth's punishment. And she at once sent letters in Achab's name to the chief men among the Jezarelites, ordering them to keep a fast and hold an assembly over which Naboth, since he came of an illustrious family, b was to preside; and, after they should have brought three c unscrupulous men to bear witness against him to the effect that he had blasphemed both God and the king, they were to stone him to death and so make an end of him. And when he came to him, the king said that the prophet might do with him as he wished, for he had acted shamefully and had been taken by him in sin, whereupon the other said that in that very place where Naboth's body had been devoured by dogs, his own blood and his wife's should be shed and all his family should perish because he had unscrupulously committed these so impious deeds, and, in violation of his country's laws, had unjustly slain a citizen. Then Achab began to feel grief and remorse for what he had done; putting on sackcloth, he went with bare feet b and touched no food and confessed his sins, seeking in this way to propitiate God. fortified cities, while he himself remained in Samaria, for this city was surrounded by exceedingly strong walls and seemed in all ways difficult to take. But the Syrian with his force came to Samaria, placed his army around it and besieged it. Then he sent a herald to Achab, asking that his envoys be received by him, that through them he might inform him of his wishes. And, when the Israelite king gave him leave to send them, the envoys came and, at their king's command, said that Achab's wealth, children and wives belonged to Adados; if Achab came to terms and allowed him to take of these what he pleased, he would withdraw his army and raise the siege. Thereupon Achab bade the envoys go and tell their king that both he and all those belonging to him were the possessions of Adados. When they reported these words to him, he again sent to Achab and demanded, since he admitted that all his belongings were Adados's, that he receive the servants who were to be sent to him the next day to search the palace and the houses of his friends and relatives, and give them whatever they might find there that was most desirable, adding, "What doesn't please them, they will leave for you." b But Achab, who was indignant at the second message of the Syrian king, brought the people together in assembly and told them that he himself was ready, in the interests of their safety and peace, to give up his own wives and children to the enemy and yield all his possessions, for this was what the Syrian had demanded when he sent his envoys the first time. Josephus greatly amplifies Ahab's speech.

Josephus seems to have misunderstood the Heb. (and Luc.) text of I Kings xx. 10, which reads "the dust of Samaria will not be enough for handfuls (šėālim) for all the people at my feet (i.e. "following me")," that is, there were more men in Ben-hadad's army than there were handfuls of dust in 770

Nevertheless, I shall do what you think best." a Then the people said that he ought not to listen to Adados's terms but should treat him scornfully and prepare for war. Accordingly, in reply to the envoys he told them to go back and say that for the sake of the citizens' safety he still agreed to the demands first made by Adados, but would not submit to the second demand. He then dismissed them.

He at once gave orders a to build a stockade around the city and throw up earthworks b and not leave any way of besieging it untried. While these things were being done, Achab was in a terrible state of anxiety together with all his people.c But he took heart and was relieved of his fears when a certain prophet came to him and told him that God promised to deliver these many myriads of the enemy into his hand. And, when he asked through whom the victory would be won, the prophet said, "Through the sons of the governors, with you to lead them because of their inexperience." So he summoned the sons of the governors, who were found to number some two hundred and thirty-two, and, when he learned that the Syrian was giving himself up to feasting and taking his ease, he opened the gates and sent the youths out. And when the look-outs reported this to Adados, he sent out some of his men to meet them, with instructions that, if the others came out to battle, they should bind them and bring them to him; and even if the enemy came out peaceably, they should do the same thing. But Achab had still another army waiting within the walls. Then the Ahab's sons of the nobles engaged the guards and killed victory over Ben-hadad. many of them, while the rest they pursued as far as 1 Kings xx. their camp. And when the Israelite king saw his (LXX XXI.) men winning the victory, he released all of his second army as well. Thereupon they suddenly fell upon the Syrians and defeated them, for these had not that reason were unarmed and drunk when they were attacked, so that they fled from the camp, leaving all their armour behind, and the king barely saved himself by making his escape on horseback. Achab went a long way a in pursuit of the Syrians, and slew them. Then, after plundering their camp, in which there was no little sum of wealth and also a large quantity of gold and silver, b and taking the chariots and horses of Adados, he returned to the city. But the prophet told him to prepare himself and hold his force in readiness, for the Syrian would again attack him in the following year; and so

Achab attended to these things.

(3) Now Adados, after escaping from the scene of Ben-hadad battle with as much of his force as he could save, took again precounsel with his friends concerning how he should war with again take the field against the Israelites. And they 1 Kings xx. were of the opinion that he should not engage them (LXX XXI.) in the hills, on the ground that their god had most power in such places, and for that reason they had recently been defeated. But, they said, they would conquer them if they fought the battle in the plain. They also advised him further to send back to their homes the kings whom he had brought along as allies. but to retain their armies and appoint satraps o in their places, while, to fill the ranks of those who had been killed, he should levy a force from their own country, as well as horses and chariots. Thereupon he approved of these words as well spoken, and arranged his force accordingly.

(4) At the beginning of spring Adados marched Ben-hadad with his army against the Hebrews and, after coming Ahab's to a certain city which is called Apheka, encamped force at Aphek in a great plain. And Achab met him with his force 1 Kings xx. and encamped over against him, although his army (LXX XXI.) was a very small one in comparison with the enemy.b But the prophet came to him again and said that God would give him victory in order that He might show His power to exist not only in the hills but also in the plains, which was what the Syrians did not believe. And for seven days both armies remained quiet in their camps, facing each other, but, when on the last day the enemy came out of their camp at dawn and drew themselves up for battle, Achab also led his force out against them. Then, after engaging them in a battle which was stubbornly fought, he put the enemy to flight and followed hard in pursuit. And they were killed by their own chariots and by one another, although a few succeeded in escaping to their city Apheka. But these too perished when the walls fell upon them-twenty-seven thousand of them. And in that battle another hundred thousand were slain. Adados, the Syrian king, fled with some of his most faithful servants and hid in an underground chamber.^d But when these told him that the Israelite kings were humane and merciful and that

^b Scripture says nothing of an oath given by Ahab; Josephus also omits the difficult phrase (1 Kings xx. 32) which 778

by using the customary form of supplication they could obtain his life from Achab, if he would allow them to go to him, he let them go. So they dressed in sackcloth and put ropes around their necks—this was the manner in which the ancient Syrians appeared as suppliants-and, going to Achab, told him that Adados begged him to spare his life and would always be his servant in return for his kindness.^a And the king, after saying that he rejoiced at Adados's surviving and not having suffered any harm in the battle, promised that he would show him the same honour and goodwill that one would accord a brother. when they had received his oath not to do Adados any wrong when he appeared,b they departed and brought him forth from the chamber in which he had hidden and brought him to Achab, who was seated in a chariot. He then did obeisance to him, but Achab gave him his right hand and let him come up into the chariot and, after embracing him, bade him take heart and not be apprehensive of any outrage, whereupon Adados thanked him and promised to show himself mindful of his beneficence all the days of his life, and offered to give back the Israelite cities which the kings before him had taken away, and to throw Damascus open to them so that they might travel there, just as his fathers had been able to go to Samaria. Then, after they had made sworn covenants, Achab presented him with many gifts d and sent him away to his own kingdom. So ended seems to mean that Ben-hadad's servants seized upon Ahab's words, "he is my brother" as a good omen. Possibly, however, Josephus takes this expression as an oath.

^e The preceding is an amplification of Scripture, which says merely that Ahab brought Ben-hadad up into his chariot.

d The gifts are an unscriptural detail.

the expedition of Adados, the king of Syria, against Achab and the Israelites.

(5) Now a certain prophet, whose name was A prophet Michaias, a came to an Israelite and bade him strike Ahab for him on the head, for it was in accordance with the releasing Ben-hadad. will of God that he should do so. And, when he i Kings xx. refused, the prophet warned him that for disobeying (LXX XXI.) the commands of God he should meet a lion and be killed. This was what happened to the man. the prophet went to another and gave him the same order and, when the man struck him and cracked his skull, he bound up his head b and, going to the king, told him that he had served in his army and had had one of the captives turned over to him by his officer 6 for guarding but the prisoner had escaped, and he was in danger of being put to death by the officer who had turned the man over to him and had threatened to kill him if the prisoner escaped. Achab then said that the punishment of death was a just one, whereupon he unbound his head and was recognized by the king as the prophet Michaias.d He had employed this trick, in dealing with him, as a way of introducing what he was going to say, which was that God would punish him for having allowed Adados, who had blasphemed Him, to escape punishment, and would cause him to die at Adados's hands, and Achab's people to die at the hands of his army. first belonged to his father but had been taken away from him by the Syrian's father.a Thereupon Josaphat willingly offered his aid-he too had a force, not smaller than Achab's b-and, when he had sent for his force to come from Jerusalem to Samaria.c the two kings went out of the city, each sitting upon his throne, and distributed pay to their respective armies.d And Josaphat bade him call the prophets, if there were any there, and inquire of them concerning the expedition against the Syrian, whether they advised them to take the field at that time. For 1 Kings there was, indeed, peace and friendship then between xxii. I. Achab and the Syrian, which had lasted three years, from the time when Achab had taken him captive and released him until that very day.

(4) So Achab called his prophets, who were some The false four hundred in number, and bade them inquire of prophets God whether, if he marched against Adados, He victory for Ahab. would grant him victory and the overthrow of the 1 Kings city on which he was about to wage war. And, when xxii. 6; the prophets advised him to take the field, saying that xviii. 5. he would defeat the Syrian and have him in his power as before, Josaphat, who saw by their words that they were false prophets, asked Achab whether there was some other prophet of God, "in order that we may know more clearly what is going to happen." Achab then said that there was one, but he hated him because he had prophesied evil and had foretold that he ¹ Kings xxii. 4=2 Chron. xviii. 3, "I am as thou art and my people as thy people," which meant that he put his force wholly at Ahab's disposal.

Josephus supplies this information, missing in Scripture. d The payment of the troops is an unscriptural detail.

Scripture does not have this detail, but Targum speaks of them as "false prophets."

On the way the eunuch informed him that all the other prophets had foretold victory to the king. Thereupon the prophet said that it was not possible for him to tell falsehoods in God's name. but he must speak whatever He might tell him about the king. But Michaias answered that it was his duty to listen to all things uttered by God, and that they were false prophets who had led him on to make war in the hope of victory, and that he alone must fall in battle.a So Achab had cause for thought, but a certain Sedekias, one of the false prophets, came to him and urged him not to pay any attention to Michaias, for he did not speak a word of truth. And as proof of this he instanced the prophecies of Elijah, who was better able than Michaias to foresee the future, for, he said, when Elijah had prophesied in the city of Jezarela in Naboth's field, he had foretold that the dogs would lick up Achab's blood just as they had licked the blood of Naboth who had been stoned to death by the crowd at his bidding. "It is clear, then," said Sedekias, "that this man is lying, since he contradicts a greater prophet in saying that within three days you shall meet death. But you shall know whether he is really a true prophet and has the power of the divine spirit; let him right now, when I strike him, disable my hand as Jadaos caused the right hand of King Jeroboam to wither when he wished to arrest For I suppose you must have heard that this thing happened." d Accordingly, when he struck Michaias and suffered no harm as a result, Achab took courage and was eager to lead his army against the Syrian. It was Fate, I suppose, that prevailed and made the false prophet seem more convincing than the true one, in order to hasten Achab's end. incidents by saying that it was Naboth's spirit that had misled Ahab's prophets into foretelling a victory for him, cf. Ginzberg iv. 187.

d The reference to Jadaos (bibl. Jadon; cf. § 231) is not found in Scripture, according to which Zedekiah, after striking Micaiah, asks, "Which way went the spirit of the Lord from me to speak unto thee?", LXX 1 Kings, "What sort of spirit of the Lord speaks in thee?"

Then Sedekias made horns of iron and told Achab that God had revealed to him that with these he should subdue the whole of Syria.a But Michaias said that within a few days Sedekias would change his hiding-place from one secret chamber to another b in seeking to escape punishment for his lying words. Thereupon the king ordered him to be led away to Achamon, the governor of the city, for imprisonment and that he should be supplied with nothing but bread and water.

(5) And so Achab and Josaphat, the king of Jeru- Defeat and salem, marched with their forces to the city of death of Ahab. Aramathē a in Galaditis. When the Syrian king 1 Kings heard of their march, he, in turn, led his army against 2 Chron. them and encamped not far from the city of Ara-xviii. 28, mathe. Now Achab and Josaphat had agreed that Achab should take off his royal garments and that the king of Jerusalem should take his place in the line of battle with the other's robe on e; by this trick they thought to escape the fate foretold by Michaias. But Fate found him even though he was without his garments. For Adados, the Syrian king, had given orders that they should slay no one else but only the king of the Israelites. So, when the battle was joined and the Syrians saw Josaphat standing before the lines, they thought that he was Achab, and rushed upon him, but, on surrounding him and coming close, they saw that it was not he, a and all of them turned back. From early dawn until late afternoon they fought, and the victorious Syrians, in accordance with the king's command, killed no one, seeking to slay only Achab and not being able to find him. But one of the king's pages, named Amanos, in shooting arrows at the enemy, wounded the king through his breastplate in the lung. Achab, however, decided not to let his army see what had happened lest they should be put to flight,d and ordered his driver to turn the chariot and carry him off the field of battle, for he had been gravely and even mortally wounded. But, though he was in great pain, he remained upright in his chariot until the setting of the sun and then, with the blood drained out of him, expired.

(6) And so, as night had now fallen, the Syrian The fulfilarmy retired to its camp and, when the herald an-ment of nounced that Achab was dead, they returned to prophecy, their own country, first carrying the body of Achab 1 Kings xxii, 36. to Samaria and burying it there. And when they washed his chariot, which was stained with the king's blood, in the spring of Jezarel, they acknowledged the truth of Elijah's prophecy, for the dogs licked up his blood; and thereafter the harlots used to bathe in the pool in this blood. But he died in Aramathē, as Michaias had foretold. Now, since there befell Achab the fate spoken of by the two prophets, we ought to acknowledge the greatness of the Deity and everywhere honour and reverence Him, nor should we think the things which are said to flatter us or please us more worthy of belief than the truth, but should realize that nothing is more beneficial than prophecy and the foreknowledge which it gives, for in this way God enables us to know what to guard against. And further, with the king's history before our eyes, it behoves us to reflect on the power of Fate, and see that not even with foreknowledge is it possible to escape it, for it secretly enters the souls of men and flatters them with fair hopes, and by means of these it leads them on to the point where it can overcome them. It appears, then, that by this power Achab's mind was deceived so that while he disbelieved those who foretold his defeat, he believed those who prophesied things that pleased him, and so lost his life. And so his son Ochozias a succeeded him.
